PREFACE

The Government of the Democratic Republic of Congo, through the work of the Ministry of Gender, Family and Children, has just consolidated the elements of its first Action Plan for implementing United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 on women, peace and security by preparing its 2nd generation Action Plan, with a view to improving inclusion of women, adolescents and young women via mechanisms for preventing, managing and resolving conflict. This Action Plan is an instrument of great importance, defining the steps to be taken by state and non-state actors working in the field of promoting human rights, particularly the rights of women, adolescent, young women and girls for a peaceful, just and egalitarian society.

As such, I appreciate and welcome the inclusive contribution made by Government experts, civil society and our Technical Partners who have developed this 2nd generation Action Plan as a tool for important work on the agenda for women, peace and security in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

I shall take this opportunity to express the gratitude of the Government of the Republic to our partners for their technical assistance and their financial support, thanks to which the development, national validation and production of this instrument has been made possible.

Bruno TSHIBALA NZENZE

Prime Minister
Foreword

The Democratic Republic of Congo has been a post-conflict state for nearly ten years but is still dealing with a resurgence of armed groups, notably in the eastern part of the country. There is still a large number of displaced persons within the country, as well as of incidents of violations of human rights, notably those of women, adolescents and young women, as well as of girls.

The Government has made tireless efforts through various national institutions with the support of the national and international community to eradicate these armed groups with a view to bringing and consolidating peace, demonstrating the importance of gender sensitivity in both the prevention and resolution of conflicts and the management of the post-conflict period.

It is within this context that the Democratic Republic of Congo has endorsed United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 on women, peace and security, adopted on 31 October 2000, with a view to realizing equality of the genders.

In an attempt to operationalize this important instrument, which will guarantee the fair inclusion of women in political governance, the DRC had adopted its first National Action Plan to implement the resolution in 2010. The First generation NAP 1325 had been inspired by the clear and steady vision of the National Gender Policy drawn up by the Ministry of Gender, Family and Children, which drew on the positive values inherent in Congolese culture amounting to an inclusive style of governance based on the involvement of all actors in society in promoting gender equality.

Eight years after implementing the first Action Plan, production of a 2nd generation National Action Plan 1325 was urgently required in that there was a need not only to conform to the requirements of the United Nations Security Council’s norms on the matter but also, and in particular, to conform to the recommendations of international, regional and sub-regional legal instruments which the country has endorsed, as well as to national laws; furthermore, there was a need to integrate the challenges and concerns brought about by the political, social and economic situation of the day, notably sustainable development objectives(SDO), the inclusion of young people, adolescents and young women, children and young girls, decentralisation, Agenda 2063, the NEW DEAL and more besides.

With this in mind, the Government of the Republic has developed this 2nd generation National Action Plan for implementing United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 with a view to equipping the country with an instrument allowing it to manifest its commitment to promoting gender equality in respect of preventing and managing conflict and consolidating peace and the rule of law.

In this respect, we must first thank His Excellency Mr. Joseph KABILA KABANGE, the President of the Republic and Head of State, who has always made promoting gender equality a priority of his mandate and who is integrating women into every stage of the implementation of his agenda.
We would also like to thank His Excellency TSHIBALA Bruno, the Prime Minister, and all the members of the government for the political will they have demonstrated in getting involved in this vast programme of integrating gender into sectoral policies and programmes as well as into the support afforded the development of this current National Action Plan.

INTRODUCTION

The Democratic Republic of Congo (RDC), a post-conflict country, has endorsed United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 on women, peace and security, adopted on 31 October 2000\(^1\) with a view to integrating the aspect of gender into the prevention, management and resolution of conflicts.

Resolution 1325 encourages member states of the United Nations to adopt policies and programmes on gender equality in peace, security and development processes.

This Resolution constitutes a legal and political instrument aimed at combating all forms of gender-based discrimination.

Eighteen (18) years after the adoption of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325, it must be noted that despite the economic crisis, the efforts undertaken by the DRC’s institutions with the support of the international community to bring peace to the country and to consolidate peace have resulted in the creation of a national legal framework that is favorable to promoting women’s rights.

However, implementation of the operational framework manifested in the National Action Plan and its mechanisms is encountering difficulties of a political, technical and financial nature, and will require the commitment of the government and its agents who are involved at every level. Efforts will have to be made to be able to achieve the objectives of Resolutions 1325 and 2250 on youth, peace, and security, the sustainable development objectives (SDO), the New Deal, agenda 2063, and the continental scope of the findings of the African Union’s agenda on women, peace and security.

1. Context and Justification

Taking a participatory and inclusive approach under the leadership of the Minister for Gender and with the support of its partners, the Government had adopted its first National Action Plan 1325 (NAP) in October 2010.

The DRC has supported the 4 pillars of this Resolution and committed itself to achieving significant progress in the active inclusion of women in all peace processes and in their representation on decision-making bodies at a local, provincial and national level.

With the first NAP for Resolution 1325 having been implemented over a period of 8 years, it became time to develop the 2\(^{nd}\) generation NAP for a number of reasons: there was notably a need to conform with the requirements of the United Nations, which recommends revisions every 4 years; and to sign up to the objectives of the New Deal, of Resolution 2250 on youth, peace, and security, the continental framework guidelines arising from the African Union’s findings on the Agenda for Women, Peace and Security, and the AU’s Agenda 2063; as well as to pursue objectives linked to the country’s current social and political situation, which has evolved from that of 2010.

\(^1\) United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325, adopted by the Security Council at its 4214\(^{\text{th}}\) session on 31 October, 2000

The current action plan squares with the strategic axes of the national gender policy by proposing to put a stop to violations of the fundamental rights of women, young women and girls during and after conflict, and to the impunity enjoyed by those committing crimes of all kinds.

There is a need to guarantee the security of women, to ensure the rule of law and the imposition of the punishments imposed under international law in respect of combating the violence done to women, young women and girls (sexual violence, in particular), and this is one of the government of the DRC’s priorities.

2. General Objective of NAP 1325 II

To promote a secure environment that guarantees the fair inclusion of women, men and young people in consolidating peace in the DRC.

3. Methodology/development process of the 2nd generation NAP

Development of the 2nd generation NAP was inclusive and underwent the following stages:

i. Producing a Road Map

Two high-level workshops were organized in November 2016 and March 2017 by the National Secretariat 1325 of the United Nations Security Council on Women, Peace and Security (abbreviated to “SN1325 UNSC”), in collaboration with UN Women, the Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom “WILPF” and TROCAIRE to produce the roadmap before defining the different stages leading up to the drafting process for the 2nd generation NAP.

ii. Evaluation of the 1st generation NAP and development of the initial rough draft of the 2nd NAP.

In April 2017, a workshop was organized to evaluate NAP1, allowing government experts and representatives of civil society to identify constraints, forces and opportunities in order to orientate themselves and make recommendations before cementing the draft of NAP 2, with support from CEAHJ and CORDAID.

The work done by this workshop made it possible to develop the initial rough draft of NAP2, taking into consideration its wider orientation, i.e. the DRC’s other commitments in respect of peace and security, including the New Deal, the Sustainable Development Objectives, African Union Agenda 2063, Resolution 2250 and the integration of vulnerable women’s issues, particularly indigenous women and those living with disability, in NAP2.
iii. The preparatory phase:

This phase consisted of setting up two working teams, of which one consisted of consultants tasked with developing the draft and the other was detailed to follow the development process.

iv. Gathering and analyzing data Collection of data was conducted using validated tools in 21 of the 26 provinces making up the DRC. This made it possible to obtain information and canvass concerns relating to the provinces. In addition, analysis of the data made it possible to gauge the level of implementation of NAP 1 and to identify the wider orientation and objectives intended for NAP 2.

v. Drafting the document

Two consultants had been recruited and proceeded to develop the draft in collaboration with the NS 1325.

- Exploratory interviews

These interviews consisted of consultations with resource persons. The aim of these consultations was to gather viewpoints relevant to challenges currently facing the country and to identify directions to take in implementing NAP 2.

- Literature review

The literature review focused on making use of legal instruments relating to the topic “Women, Peace and Security” especially Resolution 1325, Resolutions 1820 and 1860, the African Union Action Plan, and the national action plans of certain countries that have already undertaken such a revision, including Belgium and Burundi, and the DRC’s NAP 1 1325, as well as national legal instruments promoting women’s rights, the 15-year anniversary reports on Resolution 1325 in the DRC, and the national report on data-gathering. The aim of this literature review was to ensure coherence in the objectives pursued in NAP 2 with a range of existing texts.

- Editing and consolidating the draft

The draft drawn up by the Consultants was read through by stakeholders at both a national and provincial level for any amendments or additions. A pre-approval workshop was organized by the NS 1325 in collaboration with CEHAIJ 1325/CORDAID to integrate all the stakeholders’ contributions and to consolidate the draft that was submitted for national approval.
CHAPTER I: REGULATORY AND INSTITUTIONAL FRAMEWORK FOR IMPLEMENTING RESOLUTION 1325

I.1. International Regulatory Framework

I.1.1. International legal instruments

Resolution 1325 serves to reinforce existing legal instruments promoting women’s rights and focuses on the importance of involving women in preventing, managing, and resolving conflict.

• Resolution 1889, also of 2009, which examines the exclusion of women from processes of rapid reparation and consolidation of peace, and the lack of adequate provisions and financing; demands a proper strategy to increase the number of women in resolving conflict and decision-making, and tools to improve its applications –indicators and proposals for a follow-up mechanism.
• Resolution 1960 (2010)
  It recommends specific measures to prevent and protect against acts of sexual violence during armed conflict and requests the SG to draw up a list of

\(^2\) Ratified on 9 September 1999
All those responsible for acts of sexual violence (name and shame) and analytical measures and follow-up reports on sexual violence linked with conflict

- Resolution 2106 (2013) notes that sexual violence may constitute a crime against humanity and is a constitutive element of the crime of genocide;
  It reaffirms that gender equality and the political, social and economic empowerment of women lie at the heart of long-term efforts to prevent sexual violence in periods of armed conflict and post conflict situations.

I.2. Regional and Sub-Regional Regulatory Framework

The following legal instruments should be cited at a regional and sub-regional level:
- The African Charter on Democracy, Elections and Governance;
- The AU Solemn Declaration on Gender Equality in Africa, adopted by Heads of State and Government of Member States of the African Union in 2004;
- African Union Agenda 2063 of 2015;

I.3. National Regulatory Framework

National Action Plan 1325 is in line with national laws, and policies, programmes and strategies relating to gender equality. These include in particular:

- The Constitution of the DRC, of which articles 14 and 15 respectively are devoted to the equality of men and women and the elimination of sexual violence;
- Law no. 15/013 of 1 August 2015 on Procedures for Enforcing the Rights of Women and Equality;
− Law no.06/018 of 20 July, modifying and completing the decree of 30 January 1940 on the Congolese Penal Code and Law no. 06/019 of 20 July 2006 modifying and completing the decree of 06 August 1959 on the Congolese Code of Penal Procedure;

− Law no. 81-003 of 17 July 1981 on the status of career personnel in State public services which determines the conditions for recruitment, remuneration, promotion and other social advantages without gender-based discrimination;

− Law no. 001/2001 of 17 May on the organization and function of political parties;

− Law no. 08/005 of 10 June on the public financing of political parties;

− Law no.13/005 of 15 January 2013 on the status of FARDC military personnel;

1.3.4. Policies, Programmes and Strategies

Certain national policies and strategies have been adopted to implement various commitments that have been made. Among these, we may mention:

− The National Gender Policy (NGP) of 2009;

− The National Strategy to combat gender-based violence (SNGBV) of 2009;

CHAPTER II. PROGRESS REPORT ON IMPLEMENTATION OF NAP 1

The first edition of the National Action Plan for Resolution 1325 was published in 2010 and has been implemented since then, a total of eight years to the present day. NAP1 covered 10 topics or areas of intervention. These include:

(i) Peace;
(ii) Security;
(iii) HIV/AIDS;
(iv) Sexual violence;
(v) Promotion and protection of women’s rights;
(vi) Political inclusion;
(vii) Consolidation of the rule of law;
(viii) Regional and international cooperation;
(ix) Research and studies
(x) Follow-up and evaluation.

2.1. Status report for implementation of NAP 1

Implementation of NAP 1 revealed the following:

• In the field of peace
The country organized several discussions between 2013 and 2018. These include in particular the Addis Ababa Agreement of 2013 (6.2%), the People’s Palace National Discussions of 2013 (12.4%), the African Union’s Negotiations on the City of 2016 (18%), St Sylvester Accord of 2016 (9.4%). The findings of all these dialogues was that inclusion of women was low.

• In the field of security
The work done in respect of reform of the security sector yielded several important results. Within the Armed Forces of the DRC (FARDC), the first women generals were appointed as military personnel by the Head of State and there were other promotions to senior officer ranks. Within the police force, 10% of senior commission ranks are held by women. The difficulties encountered in this sector are due to the fact that men outnumber women, but women are also less well trained than men to be able to stand for promotion to higher ranks.

During implementation of NAP1, the country also passed other essential laws relating to defense and the police force, in particular organic laws on (respectively) the organization and function of the police and the defense forces (Armed Forces), as well as laws on the status of career police officers and military personnel, integrating the perspective of gender, especially in respect of recruitment to these elite units.

• On the topic of sexual violence

With the ongoing armed conflicts in certain parts of the nation’s territory, sexual violence has continued not only as a result of the silence of the victims, but also because of the fact that certain perpetrators of these crimes are unknown.

• On the topic of HIV/AIDS

The action undertaken on the topic of HIV/AIDS were intended to reduce its prevalence and address access to antiretrovirals for infected people. With the country’s adoption of the National Sanitation Development Plan (NSDP) and the 2014-2017 national strategic plan for HIV, the infection rate has dropped from 2.57% to 1.1%.

• In the field of promoting and protecting the rights of women

This field aimed to improve legal frameworks, in particular revision of the Family Code and adoption of the law on the equality of men and women. With the advocacy work done, two major results had been achieved. These include modification of law no. 16/008 of 15 July 2016, modifying and completing the Family Code, and the promulgation of law no.15/013 of 1st August 2015 on procedures for enforcing the rights of women and equality. In the meantime, Parliament adopted the law on organization of elections in the DRC in 2011.

• In the field of political inclusion

The action undertaken in the field of political inclusion sought a significant improvement in the numbers of women in decision-making bodies, with special emphasis on youth.

In fact, the number of women in office was 10.4% in the National Assembly; 4.6% in the Senate;
10.2% in the National Government, 3.8% as Provincial Governors; 9% as Provincial Deputies;
10.6% as Secretary Generals of Public Administration; 8.1% of chairpersons of Administration Councils of Public Enterprises; 7% of chairpersons of political parties.

• On the consolidation of the rule of law

The objectives pursued in consolidation of the rule of law consisted in particular of achieving a full commitment from decision-makers to protecting and defending the rights of women, young women and girls, and of promoting and consolidating gender equality in Congolese society.
Bearing in mind the fundamental principle of the SDOs, “Leave no one behind”, a particular focus had to be placed on categories of women that are often marginalized, such as women living with disability, indigenous women, women in rural areas, etc.
These objectives were in fact covered in the field of protecting and promoting women’s rights.
• In the field of regional and international cooperation.
In the field of international cooperation, the participation of the DRC was noted in international, regional and sub-regional forums dedicated to comparing notes and exchanging experiences between states on the implementation of Resolution 1325, participation in the forum on the development of the ECCAS action plan and participation in other forums.

• On follow-up and evaluation
Aspects of particular note in respect of follow-up and evaluation work include publication of the 15-year anniversary reports and of the 2016 and 2017 reports, the appointment of 21 follow-up Provincial Secretariats for implementing Resolution 1325, production of the 2nd generation NAP and more besides.

II.3. Lessons learned
Implementation of NAP 1 has made it possible to draw a certain number of conclusions. These include
In particular:

− The low awareness of NAP among the general public;

− The poor results achieved in women’s representation and inclusion at negotiation tables and in decision-making bodies because of cultural inertia;

− The persistence of sexual violence and other violations of women’s rights;

− The extremely low representation of women in command roles in the Army and the Police, and in the other security services;

− Poor uptake of NAP by the Government;

− Weak support from partners in the implementation of NAP;

− Non-inclusion and lack of integration of young women and women living with disability in the implementation of NAP.

II.4. On gathering and analyzing data
The data-gathering process essentially amounted to an evaluation of the implementation of NAP 1 in 21 provinces of the country. In addition, it provided provincial actors involved in the implementation of NAP 1 an opportunity to have their say from their own perspective on the wider orientation and objectives of NAP 2 and to provide information and voice the concerns relevant to their respective provinces that should be considered in NAP 2.

Insights gains from data-gathering.
The following insights were gained from the data-gathering carried out in 21 provinces:
− 78% of the actors surveyed who were working in the field of women, peace and security declared an awareness of NAP 1;
− 48.35% of participants were active in the field of protection, 40.71% were involved in prevention and 35% in reparation;
− In respect of the topics, fields and areas addressed, 49% of actors involved gave priority to the topic of Peace, followed by security on 48.2%, promoting the rights of women on 45%, political inclusion on 40.5%, sexual violence on 43.1%, HIV/AIDS on 29%, followed by consolidation of the rule of law on 24%;
− More than 95% of the actors wished NAP 2 to be aligned with the pillars of Resolution 1325 rather than NAP 1.

II.5. Best Practice

The implementation of NAP 1 has highlighted several best practices. These include in particular:

(i) forums for swapping notes and experiences among actors in the field of women, peace and security in the Great Lakes Sub-region;
(ii) publicizing the NAP and legal texts guaranteeing women’s rights;
(iii) advocacy for respect of judicial procedural timetables and follow-up prosecutions of cases of sexual violence in the courts to convict perpetrators;
(iv) formation of peace committees in provinces affected by armed conflict;
(v) creation of synergy for peace in the Great Lakes Region, etc.

II.6. Challenges to overcome

The implementation of NAP 1 presents several challenges which will have to be overcome by the 2nd generation NAP.
These include in particular:

(i) the fair inclusion of women, with consideration of vulnerable women, young women and girls in decision-making bodies and mechanisms for the prevention and peaceful settlement of conflict;
(ii) widespread publicizing of the 2nd generation NAP and of legal texts Guaranteeing women’s rights;
(iii) persistent acts of violence;
(iv) the impunity of perpetrators of violations of women’s rights, the increased inclusion of women and young women in security service decision-making bodies.
CHAP III. PRIORITY AXES OF INTERVENTION

The current 2nd generation NAP has been produced with a clear definition and delimitation of the priority axes of intervention, which are intended to reflect the present priorities of the government of the DRC; these include 4 axes of intervention. These are
- Inclusion;
- Prevention;
- Protection and;
- Recovery.

III.1. Objectives

The current National Action Plan 1325 (NAP1325) pursues 11 specific objectives drawn from Resolution 1325 and is aligned with the New Deal, the guidelines of the international framework of the findings of the African Union Agenda on women, peace and security, African Union Agenda 2063 and the SDOs to which it is linked, the expected results, the activity to be undertaken with their intervening actors and the key indicators for measuring change.

AXIS 1. “INCLUSION”

Inclusion is intended to increase the number of women and AYW in decision-making bodies, negotiations and peacekeeping missions, in addition to any other mechanism with a bearing on peace and security.

This axis comprises 2 specific objectives, viz:

Objective 1. Helping to raise the inclusion rate of women and young women to 20% within local, provincial, national, regional and international institutions and mechanisms for preventing, managing and resolving conflict and in the security services

The representation of women and young women within national, regional and international institutions and mechanisms for preventing, managing and resolving conflict and in the security services, and in all negotiations intended to restore peace still remains very low.

In order to be able to achieve this objective, advocacy programmes will be undertaken with a view to obtaining commitments from officials to align women in various peace negotiations. In addition, awareness-raising measures will be intensified on female leadership among women and AYW, with special emphasis on women in rural areas and vulnerable women (women living with disability and indigenous women).

Objective 2. Helping to raise to 20% the inclusion rate of women and young women in decision-making bodies of socio-political, economic, public and private institutions

Since embracing democratic voting, the DRC has successfully held two free elections, in 2006 and 2011. Women have always been included in these two Presidential and Legislative elections. However, despite their superior demographic weight to men, women have taken up no more than 11% of the seats in the National and Provincial Parliaments. The representation of women has been no greater in the two successive governments the country has elected, not exceeding 7% of ministerial portfolios. Women occupy only 18% of the decision-making roles within public and private enterprises. As a result, women have almost no room for manoeuvre in being able to influence to their advantage the policies and development programmes implemented in the country. It will thus be necessary to pursue this work in such a way as to increase the representation of women by a significant degree, both in number and in quality, and both in decision-making bodies and for electoral and nominative mandates.

AXIS 2. “PREVENTION”

This axis seeks to prevent all forms of violation of the rights of women, young women and girls during and after armed conflict.

The prevention axis comprises 5 specific objectives. These are:

Objective 3. Large-scale publicization of legal instruments promoting the inclusion of women in political and public governance and NAP 1325

The base study on levels of awareness of Resolution 1325 and other national legal instruments relating to the rights of women carried out by CEHAJ 1325 in the districts of FUNA and Lukunga in 2016 indicates that 85% of the people surveyed were unaware of Resolution 1325.

Overall, the national data-gathering report established the rate of women who were unaware of the first NAP 1325 and of legal instruments guaranteeing human rights in general and the specific rights of women in particular to be more or less 22%.

Objective 4. Setting up community-based mechanisms for early warning and peaceful resolution of conflict

Armed conflict is at the root of all the violations to which women, adolescents and young women fall victim and requires a robust mobilization of the entire community with a view to preventing it from occurring.

To achieve this, concrete action will be taken, in particular to:

(i) Study and revise the laws and programmes dealing with situations of violence and insecurity in public administration and special security structure within the country;

(ii) Train women, adolescents and young women in techniques for early warning, mediation and peaceful resolution of conflict;

(iii) Setting up operational surveillance systems of violations of the rights of women, of adolescent and young women, and of vulnerable persons;

(iv) Instituting committees of peace mediators in every province, to include women and young women of different categories and made up from all the movements across the country;
(v) Aligning women and AYF into all missions for negotiation, mediation and peaceful resolution of conflict.

Objective 5. Reducing the rate of recruitment of child soldiers (young girls and boys) within armed factions

With armed factions still present and active in the eastern part of the country in particular, girls are still being forcibly recruited, and the presence of girls within armed factions involves serious consequences both for the community at large and for the girls themselves. In fact, a great number of the girls currently in armed factions have no future there; they nonetheless constitute a danger to the community as they have been brought up to live in criminality. Reform of the security sector that is underway in the country is reinforcing consideration of gender at every level of the process and in the setting up of mechanisms for looking after war invalids (persons with war-related disability), especially where these are young ex-combatants.

Objective 6. Helping to raise the inclusion rate of women and AYW in decision-making bodies within the security services

Women currently occupy no more than 2.8%, 6.7% and 19.46% of command ranks within the Army, the Police and the justice sector respectively. A significant presence of women within the decision-making bodies of these services would thus constitute a security guarantee to prevent violations of women's rights, and the work to achieve this goal will consist of organizing knowledge exchange workshops and advocacy work with officials from these services and bodies in such a way as to increase the inclusion rate of women amongst their ranks.

Objective 7. Reinforcing control and reduction of the circulation of small arms and light weapons

Armed conflict contributes to the proliferation of light weapons. These light weapons claim more victims among women and girls as a result of their activity related to foraging for food, water and firewood. There is thus a necessity to reinforce control and reduction of the circulation of light weapons in such a way as to save more human lives, particularly those of women. It will thus be necessary to proceed to organize working sessions between those coordinating implementation of NAP1325 and the national commission for the control of small arms and light weapons and reduction of armed violence with a view to considering gender. Furthermore, awareness-raising campaigns will also be organized for the benefit of the public about combating the proliferation of small arms and light weapons.

The involvement of women, young women and persons living with disability in programmes to combat the proliferation of light weapons is a great asset in identifying networks and other holders of illegal weapons.

AXIS 3. “PROTECTION”

This field seeks to assure protection of their rights for women, young women, children and other vulnerable persons during and after conflict. This axis is linked to objectives 10, 11, 12 and 14 of Resolution 1325, the “justice and security” objective of the New Deal, SDO 16, and objectives 11, 12 et 13 of African Union Agenda 2063.

The protection axis comprises the 2 following specific objectives:

Objective 8. Guaranteeing respect for the rights of women, adolescents and young women, and for other vulnerable and marginalized persons (persons living with disability, indigenous persons, refugees and displaced persons, etc.) during and after conflict

During and after armed conflict in the DRC, women, adolescents and girls have been involved in a number of incidents of the hardships of war, with detrimental consequences linked to the violation of their fundamental rights, necessitating care and treatment programmes for survivors to lift them out of difficulty.

To achieve this, actors will have to take steps to:

(i) widen the skillsets of judicial employees (magistrates, clerks, bailiffs, prison staff), auxiliaries of the justice system (advocates, defense lawyers) and police and military personnel;
(ii) pursue the institution of courts and tribunals throughout the country;
(iii) renovate or construct penal institutions, prisons and cell blocks that take consideration of the gender-specific needs of men and women;
(iv) pursue the organization of community policing (PdP) right across the country;
(v) set up mechanisms for transitional justice in all the provinces, (vi) inform all women of their rights.

Objective 9. Combating impunity for sexual violence and other violations of the rights of women, adolescents, young women and girls during and after armed conflict

Sexual violence is one of the most common types of violations of rights utilized by armed factions. It should be noted that the country is facing up to considerable challenges in order to bring justice and make amends to victims by organizing trials and payment of reparations by the courts and tribunals within a reasonable time.

The steps taken to achieve this objective will include:

(i) trying and sentencing the perpetrators of sexual violence and other violations of the rights of women and girls during armed conflict;
(ii) equipping the courts and tribunals with human resources and adequate materials.

AXIS 4. “RECOVERY”

Countries emerging from conflict face enormous challenges in respect of recovery and reconstruction in the wake of massive destruction and irreplaceable loss. Consolidation of peace largely remains the prerogative of a male elite, despite the generally acknowledged notion that men and women should be equal in this process and that the inclusion of all contributes to the peace process.
In post-conflict situations, empowerment of women and AYW is one of the determining factors contributing over the short term to re-establishment of stability, reintegration, socioeconomic progress and durable peace.

This axis is linked to objectives 12, 13, 15, 16 and 17 of Resolution 1325, to objectives 4 “Economic foundations” and 5 “Revenues and services” of the New Deal, to SDO 1 (Eliminating poverty in all its forms throughout the world), SDO 5 (Achieving gender equality and empowering all women and girls), SDO 16 (Promoting the advent of peaceful and open societies for the purposes of lasting development) and objectives 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 7 and 18 of African Union Agenda 2063, subsuming 2 specific objectives.

Objective 10. Integrating the dimension of gender into the management and peaceful resolution of conflict

Although women and AYF are the main victims of conflict, their specific needs are not considered.

Integrating the dimension of gender into the process of management and peaceful resolution of conflict will make it possible to accommodate the specific needs of women, young (and adolescent) women, and of marginalized groups (persons living with disability, indigenous peoples etc), to increase their empowerment or to progress the equality of the sexes.

The measures to achieve this objective will consist of analysis and integration of the dimension of gender in interventions, projects and post-conflict development programmes.

Objective 11. Guaranteeing the socio-economic empowerment of women and AYW victims of conflict

It should be pointed out that large-scale investment in the socioeconomic empowerment of women generates social dividends over the short and long term, including in post-conflict situations. In essence, investment in the economic empowerment of women is the surest route to the equality of the sexes, the eradication of poverty and inclusive economic growth. Women make an enormous contribution to the economy, be it within companies, in farming enterprises, as entrepreneurs or employees, or through their unpaid work at home, where they look after their families. It is within such a framework that concrete action is planned to guide women in leaving the vicious circle of poverty and marginalization with a view to guaranteeing their effective empowerment before, during and after periods of conflict.

The important thing will be to provide women and AYW with a chance of education and training in every field again, to enhance their capacity to act in order to advance equality in promoting the social economy. Women should also be encouraged to join farming collectives where they can take out loans and obtain fertilizer in order to improve their productivity via small businesses and other revenue-generating undertakings.
