Index of Statements made during the General Debate of the 73rd Session of the General Assembly (25 September - 1 October 2018)

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Overview (p. 1)
Gender Analysis (p. 7)
Country-Specific Analysis (p. 10)
Table: Type of Reference by Country (p. 11)
Extracts from Statements (p. 14)

The Gender Index examines the statements delivered by the representatives of Member States and delegations with an observer status, as well as the President of the UN General Assembly and the UN Secretary-General, during the General Debate of the 73rd session of the United Nations General Assembly (UNGA73) from a feminist perspective based on human rights, disarmament and the Women, Peace and Security Agenda. It includes all references made by the UNGA73 delegations to specific WILPF PeaceWomen themes¹, women's rights and experiences, as well as references to conflict prevention, transformation of the multilateral system and addressing structural barriers to women's engagement, including patriarchal gendered norms and economic inequality. It also provides a gender-specific assessment of the references to specific country situations in Colombia, Syria, Nigeria, Iraq, Palestine, Cameroon, Ukraine, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Libya and Bosnia and Herzegovina and determines the number of female speakers.

OVERVIEW

During the General Debate, country representatives from 197 Member States and observer delegations put forth their concerns, positions and priorities under the theme, "Making the United Nations Relevant to All People: Global Leadership and Shared Responsibilities for Peaceful, Equitable and Sustainable Societies"². The meeting was chaired by H.E. Ms. María Fernanda Espinosa Garcés, the fourth woman as well as the first Latin American woman to become an UNGA President.

The participants discussed the current opportunities for building sustainable peace and just societies, strengthening an international response to the migration crisis, re-channeling funds in a way that prevents humanitarian crises around the world, and beyond. On the Women, Peace and Security Agenda, the UNGA 73 conversations took place on the role of women in peace work, gendered strategies of terrorist groups and gender-sensitive implementation of the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration.

One of the prevalent topics of the discussions was the idea of reconsidering the role of the UN and its Security Council in order to better adjust to the current security situation. The representative of Suriname, in this regard, said, “the process to reform the Security Council must be comprehensive, inclusive, balanced and consensus-based, taking into account the interests of both developed and developing countries and further promoting, preserving and strengthening international peace and security”³. Many of the reforms discussed focused on making the Security Council more inclusive and representative of diverse global needs, including by rotating its permanent members, establishing a more equal power structure between the permanent members and the rest of the Security Council, adopting a “human security” vision based on conflict prevention and economic reforms rather than militarised approaches, as well as reforming veto power specifically in cases of sexual violence and crimes against humanity.

Reiterating the provisions of Security Council Resolution 2282 (2016)⁴, the discussion during the General Debate, as well as a variety of side-events, brought into light the widespread concern about the fragmentation of the UN system and the lack of policy coherence and institutional collaboration that hinders effective conflict prevention and perpetuates destructive conflicts. As pointed out by the representative of France at one of the side-events, human rights violations against minority groups often constitute crimes against humanity and genocide, while being completely ignored by the international security architecture. Similarly, Pramila Patten, Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, pointed out gendered strategies of terrorists⁵, with not a single case of sexual violence by terrorists in Iraq being prosecuted. Indeed, the speakers agreed that without accountability, international law is ineffective and enables the cycle of violence to continue. Michelle Bachelet, High Commissioner for Human Rights, summarised the discussions pointing that “fairness and dignity, justice and equality that bring peace and sustain development”.

The conversation on peace came about loud and clear at the 24 September 2018 Nelson Mandela Peace Summit⁶, which offered world leaders the opportunity to renew their commitment to global peace, conflict prevention, promotion and protection of human rights and long-term development initiatives. One of the most common Nelson Mandela quotes to be cited at the Summit was: “To be free is not merely to cast off one's chains, but to live in a way that respects and enhances the freedom of others”. This stood in stark contrast to the lack of representation and recognition of the rights and roles of women displayed in the statements delivered at the Summit. Although the political declaration recognises that women’s early and full engagement in peace processes increases awareness of, and responsiveness to, women’s rights and needs, Member States are yet far from matching their actions and words and ensuring that women are meaningfully represented in peace work.

The annual meeting of the Women, Peace and Security Focal Points Network⁷ presented recent analysis of Security Council implementation of the Women, Peace and Security (WPS) Agenda and pointed positive steps by the Security Council on the inclusion of WPS considerations and gender analysis in its response to country-specific and regional crisis situations, including through increased partnership with civil society. The resolutions that have been adopted and reports considered on specific thematic issues, including small arms and light weapons (SALW)⁸, demonstrate inclusion of the WPS Agenda therein. The establishment of the Informal Experts Group on WPS in 2016 was also noted as an important step that enabled Security Council members to receive in-depth information on gender conflict analysis and has provided Security Council members with the information necessary to incorporate focused gender concerns into interventions in the Security Council. At the national level, 76 National Action Plans⁹ on Security Council Resolution 1325 and a number of feminist commitments¹⁰ are important identifiers of a Member State’s commitment to gender equality and justice. Several discussions have also raised an important role of women’s initiatives on the ground in Yemen, Afghanistan and beyond. These initiatives support conflict prevention, rebuild communities and create feminist peace.

Over the past decade, an unquestionable evidence base has emerged demonstrating that women’s participation in peace and security and humanitarian processes makes peace and humanitarian work more effective, strengthens the protection efforts of peacekeepers, prevents radicalisation and the spread of extremism, and accelerates economic recovery.

Furthermore, evidence shows that women's meaningful participation results in a more sustainable peace. Yet, the conversation during the UNGA73 confirmed that commitments to support women's meaningful participation fall enormously short. Out of 1,187 peace agreements reached from 1990 – 2017, only 19 per cent references to women, and only 5 per cent referred to gender-based violence. Moreover, there is an enormous gap in resources to support women peacebuilders and responders as they make this transformative change. In 2015-2016, only 5 per cent of aid allocated to programmes in fragile and conflict-affected countries targeted gender equality as the primary objective¹¹.

In response to this situation, several opportunities have been discussed on the margins of the General Debate on how to flip the progress, including by providing the opportunity to direct resources through the Women's Peace and Humanitarian Fund, which supports local women's action in conflict, the Central Emergency Response Fund, which serves as a financial mechanism to respond to humanitarian crises, and the Secretary-General's Strategy for Financing the 2030 Agenda¹², which focuses on financial innovations, technologies and digitalisation to create equal access to finance. However, as rightly pointed out during the side-event, "Promoting Gender-Responsive Migration Governance through the Global Compact for Migration", very much will depend on gender-sensitive implementation and the ability of the international community to manage funds in a way that does not support "economic colonisation"¹³ of marginalised groups and ensures sustainable peace and development for all.

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) were also at the core of the discussions at the UNGA73. On 25 September 2018, the world has celebrated the #Global Goals Day¹⁴, featuring the commitment of different stakeholders to the implementation of the 2030 Agenda. To strategise ahead of the 2019 Review of SDG16 (on peace) and the four-year review of all SDGs and 2020 (the 75th Anniversary of the UN and the 20th Anniversary of the WPS Agenda), multiple events were held throughout the week featuring different sustainable development initiatives. This included an event on the Secretary-General's launch of the "Youth 2030: Working With and For Young People Strategy"¹⁵, aimed at restructuring and mainstreaming the involvement of youth in the UN system and in achieving all 17 SDGs.

Aiming to facilitate commitments, encourage reporting and allow Member States, civil society, the private sector and youth to share how they are taking steps on meeting SDG16, Pathfinders hosted a “Stand Up for SDG16+: Accelerating Progress for Peaceful, Just and Inclusive Societies” event¹⁶. Similarly, the Action Platform for Peace, Justice and Strong Institutions¹⁷ was launched by the UN Global Compact to facilitate the understanding, reporting and implementation of global business standards in the relevant areas as well as provide a platform for dialogue between the private and public sector. Launched initiatives vital to reaching SDG16 missed however to integrate a gender perspective and recognise the interconnectedness between SDG 5 (on gender equality) and SDG 16 (on peace). Although the SDGs are not always translated through a women’s rights framework, this shows that they can provide a foothold to mobilise behind activist demands gender-sensitive demands have not translated.

While sustainable development and building peaceful, just and inclusive institutions remain the key for effective conflict prevention and sustainable peace, the very needed conversation on disarmament was missing. With 19 States Parties and 67 signatories, the Treaty on the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons and disarmament action gains more and more recognition. As pointed out by Ray Acheson, WILPF’s Disarmament Programme Director, “abolishing nuclear weapons is about preventing violence and promoting peace. It is neither strategic nor stable to deploy thousands of nuclear weapons, risking total annihilation of us all. It is neither strategic nor stable to spend billions of dollars on nuclear weapons when billions of people suffer from our global inability to meet basic human needs for all”¹⁸ At the same time, the world’s military expenditure keeps growing. According to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, global military expenditure rose to $1739 billion in 2017¹⁹. The statement by the United States President Donald J. Trump that announced the ongoing increase of country’s military spendings, along with numerous calls for military engagement in Venezuela and Iran, encouraged a military confrontation, building up military industrial complex and enhancing separation policies at the expense of partnership and cooperation.²⁰

In the era of growing militarised rhetoric, it is important to ensure that gender perspective and women’s leadership and participation is ensured in all stages of planning the peace around emerging world's issues. On the Koreas, the UNGA73 saw a number of formal and informal discussions some positive discussions on opportunities for peace. The signing of the Panmunjom Declaration for Peace, Prosperity and Unification of the Korean Peninsula was described by the President of the General Assembly, H.E Maria Fernanda Espinosa Garcés as “a historic milestone to a new era of peace and the denuclearization of the Korean peninsula”. Peace activist and Co-Chair of the PyeongChang Appeal for Peace, a Forum aimed at focusing on the Korean peace process, emphasised “the Korean peace process is a people-centered movement with a fair involvement of youth and women.” Similarly, Women Cross DMZ has been calling for an end to the armistice agreement and the creation of a peace treaty with women’s meaningful participation and rights at the center that ends the almost 70-year-long Korean war²¹. At a time when the discussion on the use of sanctions and the strengthening of the UN command’s mandate is happening, it is important that women’s meaningful participation and rights are ensured, including through holistic gender analysis from women civil society.

Migration and displacement was a common thread among the statements made by world leaders. In general, these references were made without a gendered perspective. The importance of mainstreaming gender in all stages of migration has been seen in the recent adoption of the 2018 Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration²², which includes a gender-sensitive and gender-responsive approach. However, the representative of Mexico noted that the adoption is not the end of the road, claiming that “now, very much will depend on gender-sensitive implementation” every step of the way. During the side-event “Empowering Girls, Opening Futures: Evidence-Based Programming for Indigenous Girls in the Americas”, one of the speakers similarly mentioned that “we need to speak to indigenous communities and listen to what they are saying and include adolescent girls in these conversations to address and support their needs”, arguing that participatory implementation is the key. There are mass movements of refugees, displaced persons and migrants in all regions of the world and it is vital to include a gender perspective to fit the specific needs of women in these situations.

The WILPF April 2017 #ReclaimUN Convening in Geneva has demonstrated that in order to make the UN relevant for everyone, it has to reclaim its status as a peace organisation. At the core of the UN mandate is saving future generations from the scourge of war. It means that the UN should prioritise action on making the UN relevant to all people, reclaiming its role as a peace organisation through women's meaningful participation, integrating the WPS Agenda across all Agendas, support disarmament efforts and restructure funding for peace efforts and not militarised efforts. This means the UN should use information and insight from communities affected by conflict and local women so as to better understand the root causes of conflict, the possibilities for change, and the policies needed to achieve it. Finally, it means putting local women and women's groups at the centre of conflict prevention efforts because they have the analysis, the knowledge and the capacity to do so.

These experiences are rarely integrated in the major UN conventions, such as the UNGA73. At the WPS Focal Point Network meeting, Abigail Ruane, WILPF's Women, Peace and Security Programme Director, affirmed that "Member States have to commit to political rather than technical change". According to Ruane, this includes addressing structural discrimination and obstacles to women's meaningful participation, rights and justice, supporting consistent gender conflict expertise and analysis, ensuring safety and justice for women human rights defenders who are the beating heart of the WPS Agenda and ensuring strong funding for WPS and gender equality. As the UN approaches the new milestone and planning to assess its performance in 2019 and 2020, it is important to put implementation of the WPS Agenda at the heart of the global action on peaceful societies.

GENDER ANALYSIS

Out of a total of 197 statements, 114 statements (57.86 per cent) contained specific and general references to women and gender. Many of these were generalised and vaguely asserted the importance of women's empowerment and gender equality, viewing women as victims rather than specific actions necessary to ensure gender equality, women's meaningful participation and respect for their rights. Most of the references to gender were simply countries expressing their congratulations to the President of the 73rd General Assembly, María Fernanda Espinosa Garcés, for being the fourth female and first Latin American woman to hold the position. However a few speakers stood out in their commitment to WPS. H.E. Mr. Mamadi Touré, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Guinea was one such speaker, saying that "the creation of an inclusive society underpins the elimination of inequalities and social barriers which prevent the participation of young people and women in economic activities and politics"²³. 80 statements (50.7 per cent) addressed women and women's situation very generally, and only 34 speakers (17.2 per cent) discussed specific initiatives and provided policy recommendations.

²³ Statement of H.E. Mr. Mamadi Touré, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Guinea, 2018. Available: <https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/guinea>

During the General Debate, only 5 per cent of speakers recognised the strong connection between the inclusion of women in peace processes and a more stable, longer-lasting peace (a 3 per cent increase from the 72nd Session). It affirmed that women's inclusion in peace processes gains more recognition and political support. The Prime Minister of Norway said, "as women rights and participation are crucial for lasting peace and stability, we will keep this issue high on our agenda"²⁴. The statement indicated that key challenges to implementation continue to be: political will, accountability and resources, as well as the existence of institutional and attitudinal barriers. Canada affirmed the importance of women's meaningful participation with the Elsie Initiative, a practical plan to double the number of women in peacekeeping operations. The President of Colombia announced that for the first time in its history, his cabinet has achieved full gender parity. The Parliament of Guinea-Bissau approved a law that guarantees a minimum representation quota of 36 per cent for women in positions of note, particularly in the National People's Assembly and in Government. The President of Spain said that over half of his Cabinet of Ministers is comprised of women.

Even though women are a formidable force for peace in every region of the world, they face entrenched and pernicious obstacles. The need for gender analysis of national and sub-national governance and peace and security efforts, essential for a comprehensive understanding of the needs and priorities of communities, was strongly supported by 47.3 per cent of speakers. The President of the Republic of Guinea-Bissau claimed, "there can be no peace when a large portion, if not most, of the population, particularly women and youth, are not sufficiently valued"²⁵. Women and girls are targets of attacks against their physical and mental integrity, stripped of their dignity, and being used as shields of war in armed conflicts. Gender norms are part of the fabric of all societies, which play an important role in determining how men, women, boys and girls access services and rights, how much power they have over resources and how they can influence decision-making²⁶. Minister for Foreign Affairs of Germany said, "only just societies will remain peaceful in the long-term - societies in which men and women enjoy equal rights and in which women participate in all social decision-making. This is not only a matter of fairness and respect. It is simply about humanity and reason"²⁷.

The speakers also highlighted the way in which the history of armed conflicts and arms proliferation has had a different impact on women due to structural discrimination and inequality, paired with gender-specific violence, such as torture, sexual and gender-based violence, among others. This was reiterated by 11.6 per cent of the Member States representatives. For example, Trinidad and Tobago, which supports the Arms Trade Treaty as a mechanism for reducing armed violence in the Caribbean region, has tabled the biennial resolution on Women, Disarmament, non-proliferation and arms control, which encourages women's participation in disarmament decision-making processes since 2010. As a contributor to assisting in the development of peace and security to Afghanistan, Kazakhstan hosted the Regional Conference on Empowering Women in Afghanistan, which focused on how the presence of arms affects women's meaningful political participation.

Despite the benefits of investing in women, the failure to allocate sufficient resources and funds has not been discussed in depth. While Papua New Guinea and Norway spoke about financing women and girl's education, there was no other mention of initiatives or intentions to invest in the WPS Agenda. The President of Ecuador expressed concern over this, saying, "big powers invest in arms instead of investing in the development of peoples"²⁸. "We do not understand how those countries, that are developed and have achieved military superiority, that have experienced wars through their own children, that those countries invest in conflicts that do not concern them, without seeking to solve them, but to aggravate or even perpetuate them," he added.

Conditionalities linked to funding provided international financial institutions (IFIs), which contribute to the feminisation of poverty and the deepening of gender inequalities, were not discussed, while there is an increased rhetoric about the engagement of private sector and corporations in the implementation of SDGs. Such an approach also prevents the international community to fully succeed in understanding root causes of violence within communities and ensure conflict prevention, including around natural resource distribution. A number of violent conflicts have erupted, in part, over the abundance of resources. The President of Zimbabwe stated, "we should address the root causes of conflict which includes poverty, inequality, deprivation, disputes over land and resources, as well as struggles for self-determination"²⁹.

COUNTRY-SPECIFIC ANALYSIS

Many Member States acknowledged the devastating impact of conflict on people across the globe and the inability of the UN to appropriately respond to crises. The majority of countries referenced the situations in the MENA region, the Korean Peninsula and Africa, including the humanitarian crisis in Yemen and Nigeria and the fragile peace situation between the Koreas. Finally, the situation in Palestine and the conflict with Israel continued to be one of the prominent topics addressed in the debate, with various Member States reiterating their support for a two-state solution.

The need to respond to the needs and support the experiences of local groups on the ground in Syria, Yemen, Libya and elsewhere gained increased support. The President of Nigeria brought attention to the fact that the terrorist insurgencies in the Lake Chad Region are fueled by local factors and dynamics. In this regard, the Prime Minister of Bangladesh invited the international community to promote women's political empowerment at the grassroots in order to respond to the crisis effectively.

The importance of disarmament for peace in conflict countries was also highlighted during the General Debate. The President of France pointed out that "the military engagement of certain countries has allowed the regime in Syria to re-establish itself, resulting in crimes for which the perpetrators will one day be held accountable"³⁰. The President of Cyprus encouraged "the cooperation of all [...] and the peoples that are the victims, those suffering from phenomena such as: [...] investments and promotion of the military industry and infrastructure"³¹.

Differently from last year, very little attention has been brought to the peace process in Colombia. At the same time, the peace process in the Koreas and its fragility has been widely referenced by the leaders of Member States. While noting that the threat of nuclear weapons resonates much more often than anyone could have imagined in the past years, the President of Slovakia expressed his hopes that the current developments in North Korea will bring tangible results. Similarly, the President of South Korea suggested that denuclearisation should be the first step that will allow the parties to focus on economic development, putting nuclear disarmament at the core of the agenda.

WOMEN SPEAKERS

The number of women speakers has not significantly changed since last year. Regrettably, only 20 female leaders (10 percent) spoke at the General Debate compared to 19 last year. In addition the President of the General Assembly, these speakers represented the following countries: Marshall Islands, Estonia, Croatia, the UK, Norway, Lithuania, New Zealand, Costa Rica, Bangladesh, Serbia, Liechtenstein, Denmark, Barbados, Australia, India, Suriname, Austria, Dominica, Timor Leste. Of these speakers, only 4 (from Croatia, the UK, Serbia,) did not mention women or gender at all, whereas 11 of them (President of the General Assembly and representatives from Marshall Islands, Estonia, Norway, Lithuania, New Zealand, Costa Rica, Bangladesh, Liechtenstein, Norway, Barbados, Australia, India, Suriname, Austria, Dominica, Timor Leste), specifically referenced women. The remaining four (4) speakers used only general references to gender equality and women's rights.

EXTRACTS FROM STATEMENTS

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Antonio Guterres, the Secretary-General of the United Nations
<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/secretary-general-united-nations>

Date: 25 September 2018

Theme: Human Rights, Sexual and Gender-Based Violence

“The digital revolution is being used to discriminate against women and reinforce our male-dominated culture. Indeed, there is a deep gender gap in access to digital technologies, widening the digital divide. We must dismantle obstacles and create opportunities for women, ensure equality and change on-line and toxic corporate cultures.”

“The drive for gender equality is gaining ground, amid a growing awareness of pervasive discrimination against women and girls, from violence, harassment and exploitation to unequal pay and exclusion from decision-making. The United Nations must lead the way in pursuit of gender equality. For the first time in United Nations history, there is full parity in our Senior Management Group and among Resident Coordinators leading country teams around the world. We are firmly committed to equality and empowerment everywhere.”

Speaker: President of General Assembly, H.E. Ms. María Fernanda Espinosa Garcés

Theme: Protection, Participation

Unfortunately, violence against women persists in all regions.

Girls and young women still suffer from lack of access to information and quality education, which would reduce inequalities.

We exclude those that are different, the poor, the old, the young, we abuse the woman, the girl, the indigenous woman. There are so many forgotten and abandoned brothers and sisters! So many people pass us by of whose presence we are not even aware!

Maybe because we were idealist teenagers, and because we continue to be non-conforming adults, we do not understand how the big powers invest in arms instead of investing in the development of peoples. We do not understand how those countries, that are developed and have achieved military superiority, who have experienced wars through their own children, that those countries invest in conflicts that do not concern them, without seeking to solve them, but that aggravate or even perpetuate them.

“The military engagement of certain countries has allowed the regime [in Syria] to re-establish itself, resulting in crimes for which the perpetrators will one day be held accountable. The Syrian people have tragically paid the price, and there can be no victors in a Syria in ruins.”

“It is not up to us to decide for the Syrian people, but to develop the ways and means to implement this method that I have just described and therefore to develop a solution that is backed, not just by the guarantor states in the Astana process, but by other states in the region and the international community through the Small Group, under the coordination of the United Nations and the special representative of the Secretary-General, in order to resolve the humanitarian crisis on the one hand and, on the other hand, to build an inclusive, lasting political solution through constitutional reform and the holding of free elections. “

“In Libya, this new method should make it possible to bring about a lasting solution. The current status quo enables the militias, the traffickers to gain ground, destabilizing the entire region. We will not give the Libyan people the means to resolve the situation if we remain divided, if Libya becomes the battleground, as it still too often is, for confrontation between foreign influences.”

“In Paris, the Libyans pledged to swiftly hold elections, which will make it possible to reunify state institutions. These commitments must be fulfilled under the auspices of the United Nations, with close cooperation from the African Union.”

“Yesterday an important step was taken, one that I would like to applaud. It is in the Libyan people’s interest and in that of their neighbours, the Europeans and the international community, which must unite around these goals in order to move forward.”

“We must also fight passionately against gender-linked inequalities. I have made gender parity in France the great cause of my five-year term, and I issue an appeal here to make this a great global cause with you. Women and girls are the first to be affected by poverty, conflict, the consequences of global warming; they are the first victims of sexist and sexual violence, which too often prevents them from moving around freely, working or choosing what happens to their bodies. “

“Our responsibility in the 21st century is to end these kinds of violence, from harassment on the street to femicide. It’s time our world stopped making women victims and at last gave them their rightful place – the one where they are leaders too! We must guarantee them access everywhere to education, healthcare, jobs, and to taking economic and political decisions, and fight every kind of violence they are subjected to. “

“So France will propose to governments wishing to move forward with us the creation of a coalition for adopting new laws for gender equality. Fifty percent of our development aid will be devoted to projects to reduce gender inequalities.”

We give special importance to end violence and discrimination against women.

Our objective is to overcome the structural inequalities that women and girls face in Peru, guarantee their human rights and empower them so they can free their full potential and development.

Our great biodiversity is the main natural resource with which our men and women rely on and for that reason, changes in temperature and extreme disasters such as droughts and heavy rains put them in a special situation of vulnerability.

We are also one of the few countries who have created a Plan of Action on Gender and Climate Change, since women are the most vulnerable among the vulnerable.

“We are facing a humanitarian, moral and legal catastrophe that obligates the international community to speed up reaching a political solution that stems the Syrian bloodshed, fulfils their aspirations for justice and freedom, maintains Syria’s unity and sovereignty and archives security and stability in Syria and the region in accordance with the Geneva-1 Communique and relevant Security Council resolution.”

“Regarding the Yemen issue, we confirm the firm position that the State of Qatar which is based on the unity, independence and territorial integrity of Yemen. We call upon all the Yemeni parties to the national reconciliation to end the conflict on the basis of the Security Council Resolution 2215, the Gulf Cooperation Council Initiative and the outcomes of the national dialogue.”

“On this platform, I appeal to the active states in the international community to help the brotherly Yemeni people to overcome these conditions, which we hope would end soon and to work for taking all measures to address the grave humanitarian situation and to facilitate free access for humanitarian assistance to all areas of Yemen. On this occasion, I announce Qatar’s agreement with the United Nations to fight cholera in Yemen by supporting projects related to combating the causes of diseases and to halt its spread. We call upon other countries to join us in supporting this vital effort.”

“The political process, which began twenty-five years ago, presented an example of a departure from the United Nations terms of reference to frameworks outside the UN- some had perceived that as the best and fastest way in settling and finding solutions to it supported by the Arab states in line with respecting the Palestinian decision, but that has resulted in further stalemate and complexity. Now we are witnessing attempts to liquidate the Palestinian cause though the liquidation of issues relating to the permanent solution such as Jerusalem, refugees, sovereignty and borders.”

“As for the Libyan crisis, which has recently witnessed developments that place the security of this country and its territorial integrity at state, we look forward to restoring security and stability despite enormous challenges facing the Libyan brothers. We note that the foreign intervention in Libyan affairs further complicates the crisis and prevents reaching a national consistency sought by the Libyan brothers, and contradicts the Security Council's resolutions. We reiterate our support that the Skhirat agreement signed on December 2015 and all its outcomes. We call upon all Libyan brothers to uphold the national interest and abide by dialogue without excluding any of the components of the Libyan community, to reach a comprehensive settlement that preserves Libyan sovereignty and territorial integrity and realize the aspirations of its people for security and stability.”

Country: Islamic Republic of Iran
(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/ecuador>)

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Hassan Rouhani, President of the Islamic Republic of Iran

Theme: None

“Negligence or inefficacy of international institutions can endanger world peace. Those seeking dominance and hegemony are enemies of peace and the perpetrators of war.”

“From the very beginning of the crisis in Syria, we have warned against any foreign intervention in the internal affairs of this country and the use of unlawful means, including supporting extremist and terrorist groups in order to exert pressure on the government of Syria, and have consistently emphasized that the crisis can only be resolved through intra-Syrian dialogue. To this end, the presence of our military advisors in Syria has been at the request of the Syrian government and consistent with international law and has aimed at assisting the Syrian government in combating extremist terrorism. Iran, Russia, and Turkey, in cooperation with the government of Syria and other Syrian parties, have succeeded through the Astana Process, the third summit meeting of which took place in Tehran earlier this month, in playing a positive role in reducing tension in Syria, and in their last common effort have prevented escalation and bloodshed in the Idlib region.”

“We have witnessed a tragic humanitarian catastrophe in Yemen over the past three years which has caused the destruction of infrastructure, the killing and injury of hundreds of thousands, the displacement of millions of innocent people, and the occurrence of widespread famine and chronic diseases. These inhuman acts represent clear examples of crimes against humanity and war crimes. The crisis in Yemen can be resolved solely through intra-Yemeni talks and without foreign interference. And to this end, we are ready to assist in any possible way.”

“The most pressing crisis in the Middle East, however, is the question of Palestine. The passage of time cannot – and must not – justify occupation. The innumerable crimes of Israel against the Palestinians would not have been possible without the material and military assistance, and political and propaganda support of the United States. Israel, equipped with a nuclear arsenal and blatantly threatening others with nuclear annihilation, presents the most daunting threat to regional and global peace and stability.”

“The abhorrent U.S. decision to transfer its embassy in Israel to Jerusalem, and the recent enactment of the racist Jewish State law are violations of international law and norms, and unmistakable manifestations of apartheid.”

Country: Republic of Finland

(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/finland>)

Date: 25 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Sauli Niinistö, President of the Republic of Finland

Theme: Participation, Peace Process, Sexual and Gender-Based Violence

“Peace and security, human rights and development are not sustainable without the participation of women and the youth. Female voices and young voices must be heard - and acted upon.”

“The needs of women, children and youth are still all too often marginalized in peace talks. Finland promotes the role of women's effective participation in peace processes through the Nordic network of women mediators. This and other similar networks provide a useful platform for advocacy and self-education.”

“As a HeForShe Impact Champion, I highly value these efforts.”

“In order for the United Nations to be credible, it has to practice what it preaches. For any organisation, every single case of sexual exploitation in its own ranks is a case too much. This is particularly true for an organisation stressing the importance of equality and human rights. I am proud to be a member of the Circle of Leadership and I welcome the efforts taken to prevent and combat all forms of abuse throughout the UN system.”

“Finland appeals to all Member States and the Secretary-General to consistently keep human rights, non-discrimination and gender equality on top of the agenda of the UN.”

Country: The Federal Republic of Nigeria
(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/nigeria>)

Date: 25 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Muhammadu Buhari, President of the Federal Republic of Nigeria

Theme: Sexual and Gender-Based Violence, Human Rights

“I also salute our distinguished Secretary-General, H.E. Mr. Antonio Guterres, who steered the affairs of the Secretariat with focused commitment to the collective United Nations pursuit of global peace and security, equality and justice, inclusiveness, women’s empowerment and human rights.”

“We commend the United Nations for staying focused on the situation of the Rohingya people, to bring their suffering to an end, and to hold to account the perpetrators of the atrocious crimes committed against innocent and vulnerable members of this community, including women, children and the old.”

“The carnage and the worsening humanitarian situations in Syria and Yemen continue unabated. But the international community cannot afford to give up on the Syrian and Yemeni people. We must pursue all efforts to find peaceful negotiated political solutions to these wars which cannot be won by force of arms alone. Regarding Syria, we hope that the UN sponsored Geneva process and the Sochi initiative, led by Russia, Iran, and Turkey advance this objective.”

“During the past year, the world saw some positive results and encouraging signs from the bilateral and multilateral efforts of the international community to address conflicts, crises and threats to world peace. We particularly commend the efforts of the leaders of the United States, North Korea, and South Korea, to realise our shared goal of a nuclear free Korean Peninsula.”

“In this connection, we acknowledge the commitment to peace shown by President Donald Trump and Chairman Kim Jong-Un by initiating a historic Summit. We urge that they continue this positive engagement.”

“The terrorist insurgencies we face, particularly in the Sahel and the Lake Chad Basin, are partly fuelled by local factors and dynamics, but now increasingly by the international Jihadi Movement, runaway fighters from Iraq and Syria and arms from the disintegration of Libya.”

“The International community must keep up the pressure to encourage the parties to pursue the path of dialogue, negotiations and inclusiveness in resolving their sectarian divides and bringing to an end the immense human suffering in Syria as well as Yemen. We commend Turkey, Jordan, Greece, Germany, Italy and France for hosting the millions of the refugees fleeing these brutal conflicts.”

“Nigeria continues to call on the Israelis and the Palestinians to make the necessary compromises in the interest of justice, peace and security, in line with our numerous UN resolutions and applicable international laws.”

“Unilateral, arbitrary and insensitive actions only prolong the conflict and undermine world peace and security. The deteriorating humanitarian situation in Gaza is an appalling result of unrestrained use of power. We urge both parties to re-engage in dialogue on the basis of relevant UN resolutions, the Madrid Principles, the Quartet Roadmap and the Arab Peace Initiative, among others.”

“Nigeria reaffirms its unwavering support for a just two-state solution, negotiated without intimidation and with Israel and Palestine existing side-by-side in peace and security.”

“I assure you all that in this advocacy, I am only reflecting Nigeria’s deep and abiding commitment to our Organisation and its founding principles and goals. From the date we joined in 1960, we have contributed our quota to the fulfilment of the mandate of the UN. We have been active participants in many Security Council and African Union authorised Peacekeeping operations around the world, beginning with the Democratic Republic of Congo operations in 1960.”

“One of the greatest challenges to the achievement of global prosperity and development is the continued exclusion of millions of women and young people from meaningful economic participation.”

“The fact that the people of Palestine have endured occupation and suffering for nearly as long as the United Nations has existed, makes their plight no less pressing, nor their suffering any less acceptable.”

“Major strides have been achieved in the field of women and youth empowerment. Women hold 25% of the ministerial posts and more than 15% of seats in parliament.”

“There can be no way out of the crisis in Syria and the plight of Yemen, except by restoring the nation state, preserving its sovereignty and state institutions, as well as realizing the legitimate aspirations of its people. Egypt fully supports a UN-led political solution in these two countries, and rejects any exploitation of these crises to create footholds for regional interventions, or enable an environment for terrorism, extremism and sectarianism.”

“We should not forget that a year has passed since the adoption of the United Nations action plan on Libya, which sought to comprehensively address the Libyan crisis, without achieving progress in its implementation. This requires us to renew our commitment to a comprehensive political solution, as set forth in the said United Nations Action Plan. If we are to halt the loss of life, the depletion of Libya's resources, and move towards the reconstruction phase, then there is no room for partial solutions neither in Libya nor in Syria or Yemen; crises of such magnitude require comprehensive and not partial solutions.”

“We cannot talk about the peaceful settlement of disputes as a founding principle of the United Nations and an indicator of its credibility, without citing the Palestinian cause. It stands as a perfect example of the failure of the international system to find a just solution to the conflict, based on international legitimacy and United Nations resolutions, that guarantees the establishment of a Palestinian State with East Jerusalem as its capital.”

“Let me emphasize that excluding women from certain spheres of life is to put to waste skills and expertise that can contribute to sustainable development. In this context, we applaud the Secretary General for exercising leadership and thus reaching gender parity amongst senior management and Resident Coordinators. Namibia is fully committed to implementing Gender Equality, which is evident in the important role women play in politics. Women are equally represented in our Executive and Legislature. The participation of women at the highest levels of governance has been consolidated when the ruling SWAPO Party took a principled decision at the 1997 Congress to increase the proportion of female delegates to the Party's congress up to 50 per cent. This was the genesis of the now constitutionally mandated SWAPO Party, Zebra style 50/50 policy, a key indicator of the importance we attach to Gender Equality. The late Secretary General Kofi Annan was right when he said, ‘Gender equality is more than a goal in itself. It is a precondition for meeting the challenge of reducing poverty, promoting sustainable development and building good governance’. The world should do more to make gender equality a reality.”

Speaker: H.E. Mrs. Kersti Kaljulaid, President of Estonia

Theme: Human Rights

"I am deeply touched by the misery that war and conflict bring, whether it's talking with internally displaced women and children in occupied Eastern Ukraine."

"Recent gender equality movements like HeForShe have come a long way to counter gender-based and sexual violence. Gender equality is at the very heart of human rights. This in mind, Estonia works actively in the Commission on the Status of Women. I have gladly accepted Secretary General Guterres' invitation to co-chair the High-Level Steering Group for Every Woman Every Child for the next two years."

Country: Lebanon

<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/lebanon>

Date: 26 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Michel Aoun, President of Lebanon

Theme: General Women, Peace and Security, Participation, Displacement

"We are on the verge of finalizing a national action plan pertaining to the execution of the Security Council Resolution 1325 which called on the member States to set action plans to enable women to take part in decision-making process, negotiations and countering conflicts. The Lebanese action plan has indeed introduced the four axes of this Resolution, and it included the guarantee of women participation in decision-making at all levels, as well as the activation of their role in conflict prevention, adopting laws to ban discrimination against women, and to protect them from violence and abuse."

"In contrast, we see that the General Assembly's Resolution 181 of 1947, stipulating the division of Palestine, took a binding character although it is not binding, and it was imminently executed while resolution 194, also adopted by the General Assembly in 1948, calling for the return of the Palestinian Refugees to their home as soon as possible, remained as mere ink on paper for seventy years."

"In this context, the right to veto or the right of objection, has undoubtedly many considerations and grounds at its origin, but its consequences affected adversely many countries and people, especially in our region, and deprived from fundamental rights."

"Unfortunately, the international political approaches for the Middle East region still lack justice and use double standards, which makes our peoples question the concept of democracy in the states considered as pioneers in this respect. The Palestinian cause is the best reflection of this picture: for the absence of justice in addressing it triggered many wars in the Middle East and created a resistance that will only end by eliminating oppression and establishing justice."

“As voted lately, at the Security Council and the General Assembly, against the proclamation of Al-Quds (Jerusalem) as the capital of Israeli. [...] Then the law ‘Jewish nation-State of Israel’ was adopted, this displacing law which relies on the rejection of the other, expressly undermines all endeavours for peace and the two state solution.”

“And to complete the landscape, there came the decision to withhold the assistance for the UNRWA which by definition stands for the ‘United Nations Relief and Works Agency of the Refugees of Palestine in the Near East, and in action ensuring assistance and protection for them pending a solution to their suffering’. Has their suffering ceased so that UNRWA’s role comes to an end? Or does the neutralization of its role pave the way to taking the status of refugee away from them and integrating them in the host countries to wipe away the Palestinian identity and impose settlement?”

National financing, even with all the efforts we make, will not be enough. It is imperative that the international community play its part in this commitment.

These contributions must contribute to a holistic, long-term perspective, to ensure inclusive economic growth and to lift millions of people out of poverty, who suffer from the worst consequences of climate change and the unjust distribution of wealth.

As part of the protection of women's rights, we developed a strategy for the prevention of femicide and sexual violence, which involves all government institutions so to empower women and to guarantee them a life free of violence.

This strategy has been strengthened with the “Spotlight initiative”, supported by the European Union and the United Nations, which seeks the eradication of social and institutional practices that damage women’s dignity. We have also strengthened the “Ciudad Mujer” program, which is internationally recognized and implemented in several countries.

“Ciudad Mujer” has supported more than 1.8 million users with health services, the defense of their rights, and capacity building for financing economic projects.

In the era of health, the implementation of the National Strategic Plan for the Reduction of Maternal Mortality, as well as the National Plan of Health Surveillance should be highlighted. Both have contributed to El Salvador’s continued reduction of its maternal mortality rate, which in 2017 was reduced to 31 out of 100 thousand births.

Theme: Sexual and Gender-Based Violence, Human Rights

We must also note a deterioration in the situation of human rights in the world. This is true when it comes to [...] generalised sexual violence, notably increasingly committed by non-state actors.

Human rights have different aspects: civil and political rights, economic and social rights, [...] but also [...] sexual and reproductive rights. We regret that the latter are too often undermined not only in their principles but also in their implementation including through the programs and projects of the United Nations so to offer women and girls control of their destiny and access to family planning.

In this context, my country has pledged financial support to programmes by UNDP and UN Women, as well as to the initiative “Girls not Brides”, with 600,000 and 400,000, respectively, as well as to a project by UNICEF/UNDP for the elimination of FGM.

The situation in the Middle East and as well as [...] in Libya is less cause for optimism. The stalemate of the peace process between Israel and Palestine remains total and the context has worsened since our last General Assembly meeting. We will not cease to remind that the principles of international law have to form the base of peace.

The explosive situation in Libya is the result of tensions that are specific to the tribal structure of Libya, but also the fact that the country serves as a breeding ground for the tensions of the Sahelian world and the Arab-Muslim world.

The war in Syria has caused an immense humanitarian crisis. It has cost countless lives.

While it is fitting to congratulate ourselves on the easing of tensions in some hot spots of the world, it is clear that we are far from the era of generalized deterrence. On the contrary, new hotbeds of crisis are emerging and testifying to an alarming resurgence of the logic of war as a way of settling conflicts. The horrors of the civil war in Yemen are a tragic illustration of the logic of the confrontation prevailing in particular in the Arabian Gulf.

As far as the situation in the Middle East is concerned, the Republic of Haiti considers that the search for a just and lasting solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict must be at the forefront of the concerns. In this respect, we believe that UN is particularly well placed to help restore confidence, which unfortunately has continued to erode over the years, in order to allow a resumption of the peace process which may eventually lead to the creation of a viable Palestinian State, living in peace alongside the State of Israel, within secure, internationally recognized and guaranteed borders.

Peace, development and security go hand in hand - we keep saying that. They must be adequately supported by appropriate, long-term investments. In particular, they require the allocation of resources better suited to the real needs of beneficiary countries, taking into account their structural vulnerabilities, which is more flexible and less subject to conditionalities that may ultimately undermine the viability of the system itself, and undermine some key development goals, including long-term stability.

In keeping with our commitments, we will focus our mandate from the Security Council on the protection of the most vulnerable in armed conflict. The protection of civilians, especially children, dignity and respect for women, the safety of schools and hospitals, the humanitarian corridors are, in our view, absolute and essential priorities.

The tragedies before our eyes in Syria, Libya and Yemen remind us of the extent of the road that remains to be traveled.

The 2030 Agenda and its 17 Sustainable Development Goals point the way for a better world. Everything is there: eradication of poverty, access to health and education, gender equality, fight against climate change.

Date: 27 September 2018

Speaker: Honourable Dr. Joseph Muscat, Prime Minister of the Republic of Malta

Theme: Displacement and Humanitarian Response

“To mass migration and the effect of displacement on both migrants and host societies, where there are vulnerable people on both sides. I mention these examples because both hit us particularly hard in Malta and in the Mediterranean. The latter is visible to all. We are in the centre of the Mediterranean, in the middle of the route between North Africa, Libya and mainland Europe. The centre of a journey, thousands of persons have undertaken over past years.”

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Mamuka Bakhtadze, Prime Minister of Georgia

Theme: Participation, Implementation

“Suffice to say, the multiparty Georgian Parliament a century ago included five women, an achievement rarely found even among the established democracies of that time.”

“A small and flexible government is counterbalanced by strong public and institutional mechanisms of control and civil society, which perfectly reflects our commitments under Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) 16.”

We are especially keen to ensure that our women, children, persons living with disabilities, elderly and young people can make meaningful contributions, and reap, the benefits of a safe and prosperous society.”

Country: New Zealand

<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/new-zealand>

Date: 27 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Jacinda Ardern Prime Minister of New Zealand

Themes: Human Rights, Participation, Protection

“In an increasingly uncertain world it is more important than ever that we remember the core values on which the UN was built. That all people are equal. That everyone is entitled to have their dignity and human rights respected.”

“So many gains have been made, each worthy of celebration. In New Zealand we have just marked the 125 year since women were granted the right to vote. We were the first in the world to do so. As a girl I never ever grew up believing that my gender would stand in the way of me achieving whatever I wanted to in life. I am, after all, not the first, but the third female Prime Minister of New Zealand.”

“We still have a gender pay gap, an over representation of women in low paid work, and domestic violence.

“We have to recommit ourselves to gender equality, but we do. And I for one will never celebrate the gains we have made for women domestically. while internationally other women and girls experience a lack of the most basic of opportunity and dignity.”

Date: 27 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Dr. Ralph Gonsalves, Prime Minister of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines

Theme: Sexual and Gender-Based Violence

“Accordingly, we urge practical resolution of the pain and suffering of the Palestinians, the people of Yemen, and those afflicted by the evil of terrorism whether state sponsored or not.”

“Our international agenda for corrective action includes too: trafficking in persons; illegal drugs and small arms; refugees from ravaged lands; violence against women and children; the growing scarcity of water and food in many nations; the war against chronic non-communicable diseases; the rising tide of religious intolerance in certain places; and the reunification of families arising from abductions of last year.”

Speaker: H.E. Mr. José Mário Vaz, President of the Republic of Guinea-Bissau

Theme: Participation

“There can be no peace when a large portion, if not most, of the population, particularly women and youth, are not sufficiently valued, when their education is considered less important, when their contribution to the economic growth of our country is not recognized or fairly compensated, when women are not, in parity with men, in positions of influence, and are ignored as the pillar of society. In my country, we recently took significant steps toward ensuring equal representation for men and women. The Parliament of Guinea-Bissau approved a Law that guarantees a minimum representation quota of 36% for women in positions of note, particularly in the National People's Assembly and in Government. As President of the Republic and guarantor of national equity and unity, I am particularly pleased and grateful for these national advances.”

As the fourth woman to be elected as the head of this Assembly, it is one more step towards a better representation of women in our institution and, I am convinced that your solid experience will be beneficial for the progress of this work and will provide the necessary energy to improve progress towards our goals.

I am all the more delighted that my government has made the advancement of women one of its priorities.

The situation in the Middle East is extremely worrying. Yemen, Syria and Palestine need more than ever the strong support of our nations. I would like to express the deep concern of my Government with regard to the proliferation of random measures taken in recent months against the Palestinian people, of which the consequences not only significantly weaken the stability of the region but also the collective effort aimed at a two-state solution.

Country: Republic of Madagascar

(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/madagascar>)

Date: 27 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Rivo Rakotovo, President and interim of the Republic of Madagascar

Theme: Human Rights

Advocacy for women and girls cannot be left out. We cannot ignore the deplorable conditions in which many women live in the world, not to mention violence in all its forms, perpetrated in the name of gender. Girls and women remain the centrality of the future of humanity.

It is therefore necessary to collectively condemn injustices, modern slavery, trafficking of human beings and child labor which affect, inter alia, women and girls. Let us give ourselves the means to improve the whole of humanity by watching over our mothers, our sisters and daughters, to whom we must concede an equitable sharing of responsibilities.

Thus, since 2014 to date, we have built 24 CARMMA (or Center for Acceleration of the Reduction of Maternal and Child Mortality), [and] 315 Basic Health Centers.

(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/costa-rica>)

Date: 27 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mrs. Epsy Campbell Barr, Vice-President of Costa Rica

Theme: Participation, Human Rights

We thank the Secretary General for his demonstrated work in achieving gender parity in the United Nations and we reaffirm our efforts to keep supporting specific measures to make this possible.

Women's economic empowerment is also vital for exercising their autonomy and for their ability to make significant contributions into the labor market, as the evidence shows. Costa Rica is convinced that it is necessary to keep moving forward in this field and we have joined forces with the United Kingdom in the Group of Championing Women's Economic Empowerment to do so.

Costa Rica condemns terrorism and violent extremism. Women and girls suffer the greatest consequences, whose consequences in some cases are indelible.

My country welcomes the participation of Costa Rican women police officers as International Observers to the United Nations Verification Mission in Colombia. We recognize the efforts of this mission to incorporate an approach of gender equality.

It is a generation that looks to the future without fear, which is manifested by a new world without weapons, without violence for the environment, for peace, for human rights, for sexual diversity, against any type of discrimination and in favor of a better world.

(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/bangladesh>)

Date: 27 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mrs. Sheikh Hasina, Prime Minister of the People’s Republic of Bangladesh

Theme: Human Rights

“Women’s empowerment and participation have been a major factor in Bangladesh’s outstanding development. We have promoted women’s empowerment through enhancing their education opportunities and facilitating their political and economic emancipation. We have created opportunities for girls to pursue their education free of cost till twelfth grade in public educational institutions. At secondary level, the ratio of girls and boys is 53:47. In early 2009, it was 35:65.”

“Bangladesh is perhaps the world’s only country, where in its National Parliament, the Speaker, the Leader of the House, the Deputy Leader of the House, and the Leader of the Opposition are all women. In the present Parliament, there are 72 elected female members. 33% seats are earmarked for women in local government bodies in order to promote women’s political empowerment at the grassroots.”

“Around 20 million women are employed in agriculture, service and industrial sectors. Women constitute 80% of 4.5 million workers engaged in the largest export earning garments sector. Women entrepreneurs are offered collateral free bank loans with 5% service charge. 10% of Small Entrepreneurs’ Fund and 10% of industrial plots are earmarked for women entrepreneurs.”

“The maternal mortality rate has decreased to 170 per 1000 and child mortality rate under the age of five has gone down to 28 per thousand.”

“We are shocked by the continued violation of the rights of the brotherly people of Palestine. This must come to an end. As the Chair of the QIC Council of Foreign Ministers, we shall continue to work with the international community for resolution of the Palestine question.”

“That Bangladesh the world knew as the land plagued by disasters, floods, droughts and hunger has done wonders in maintaining international peace, managing disasters, empowering women and consolidating development gains.”

Theme: Participation, Sexual and Gender-Based Violence, Peacekeeping

“I would like to begin by highlighting that this is the first time in history that a Latin American woman, Maria Fernanda Espinosa, is presiding over this Assembly. This is yet another reflection of the fact that in the twenty-first century, global governance is inconceivable without the leadership of women. I am a feminist politician. Now is the time for women.”

“Because without dignity, without equality between women and men, without respect for human rights, there will be no peace and no development.”

“We must develop a truly global roadmap to eradicate all forms of discrimination still suffered by women, whether it is gender-based violence, trafficking of women, or female genital mutilation. “

“The cabinet of Ministers I lead is made up of 60% women, because we aim to lead by example. I would like to congratulate the Secretary General on having reached full parity in his Senior Management for the first time in the history of the United Nations.”

“Spain will continue to promote the Women, Peace and Security Agenda. It is crucial that women participate as peace brokers in all phases of conflicts.”

Women occupy an important position in terms of candidature as well as the seats that have been gained, especially since the position of chairperson of the local council district of Nouakchott is female. These results show the progress that women have made in elections and this is because the national, political circles allow for the participation of women at all levels of decision-making so they can occupy political, military and judicial positions, as well as a quota that has been allocated to women in all elected seats and positions.

Human rights has a very important position in our national politics and is embodied in our continued efforts to achieve and to entrench human rights and improve the situation and condition of prisons and to protect prisoners of torture and to combat any harmful practices against women and children.

We call for an equitable solution that is a viable one and it is based on relevant Arab and international terms of reference and which would lead to the establishment of a state of Palestine with Alkoods Ashreef as the capital.

As for the situation in Syria, we like to confirm the need to seriously strive to arrive at a political solution through a comprehensive national dialogue that would maintain the unity of Syria as well as independence and dignity of the people and the right to live in peace and security.

As for sisterly Yemen, we call for putting an end to divisions and adopt and call for a peaceful solution based on the three terms of reference and support the United Nations efforts that aim to arrive at a political solution to this crisis.

Country: The Principality of Liechtenstein
(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/liechtenstein>)

Date: 27 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mrs. Aurelia Frick, Minister for Foreign Affairs, Justice and Culture of the Principality of Liechtenstein

Theme: Human Rights

“It is a great joy and personal satisfaction to me to see a woman preside over this Assembly. It is the tenth time that I have the honor to speak in this historic hall. And it is the first time in all those years that a woman holds the highest office here at the United Nations. I salute your leadership - and we will support you. But it is also disappointing to see that the UN - which should be a trailblazer on the empowerment of women - so frequently misses opportunities to make appointments that resonate outside this building. All the more, I thank Secretary-General Guterres for his commitment to gender parity. His resolve has illustrated that this goal is achievable - and relatively quickly. We have yet to realize full gender equality in practice back home, in Liechtenstein. And we will continue looking at the UN for setting examples that guide us on our own path.”

“Seventy years ago, in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, we agreed that ‘No one shall be held in slavery or servitude’. Today, over 40 million people, predominantly women and girls, live in these conditions. This is unacceptable.”

“One such institution is the accountability mechanism for Syria. We were proud to lead the way to the creation of the IIIM two years ago. Born out of the frustration over the deadlock in the Security Council, it has quickly become a symbol of what this Assembly can achieve - and a beacon of hope for Syria. At this critical moment in the Syrian conflict, our resolve to ensure accountability for the crimes committed will shape the future of the country.”

Date: 27 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Augustine Phillip Mahiga, Minister for Foreign Affairs and East African Cooperation of the United Republic of Tanzania

Theme: Displacement, Participation

“Currently, we are hosting more than 330,000 refugees, mainly from Burundi and DRC. Over the years, and decades of hosting refugees, Tanzania has provided local integration as a durable solution to many refugees than any other country in the world in excess of 150,000 refugees.”

“The people of DRC continue to face challenges of peace, security and stability. The country has continuously been destabilized by warring factions and war lords that have created havoc leading to political instability in some parts of the country. This situation has not only denied DRC the opportunity to develop its country and people, but has also undermined and threatened regional peace and security. [...] The stability in DRC does not only contribute to address the refugee problem, but also accelerates regional trade, investment, and economic prosperity opportunities.”

“In this regard, Tanzania encourages the international community to extend both logistical and financial support to DRC so that it can successfully complete the necessary preparations for, and holding of, the elections. To this end, it is necessary to continue with the UN stabilization mission under MONUSCO and FIB in the eastern part of the country until elections are concluded.”

“Tanzania reiterates its position in resolving the conflict between Israel and Palestine by supporting the two-state solution. We understand that Palestine has the right to enjoy its independence and peace as is Israel in accordance with the United Nations Charter. It is our belief that it is within the creative and resourceful ability of Israel and the determination of the Palestinian people to reach a peaceful solution that will permit Israel and Palestine to co-exist in peace and security.”

Theme: Human Rights

“Guyana fully recognizes the necessary, nay critical, contribution of women and girls to its sustainable development. Women and girls constitute more than half the world's population and the underutilization of their potential represents a serious loss of resources in the global effort to promote human development. We are trying to ensure that the management of this development is undertaken with women and girls fully represented at the helm of decision-making. We applaud the steps taken by the Secretary-General to ensure parity in the appointment of senior managers of the Organization, including Resident Coordinators in the field.”

“We support the launch of international initiatives to create conducive conditions for restarting the Middle-East Peace Process via bilateral talks. We think that this is the way to achieve a final agreement, based on the principle of two states, coexisting in peace and stability.”

“In terms of Libya, Bulgaria supports the UN Action Plan and the efforts of the Mission of the United Nations Support Mission in Libya, whose primary task is stabilizing the country and reaching national conciliation in the context of political and institutional fragmentation. We support the agreements reached by the four key political leaders for conducting presidential and parliamentary elections.”

“The situation in Syria remains dramatic. In spite of the efforts of the international community, military activities in the country continue, leading to an increasing number of casualties among the civilian population, as well as to thousands of new emigrants. As a country that is geographically close to Syria, Bulgaria support efforts to prevent further escalation of the military conflict. Pursuant to this, we support the continuation of political dialogue and the intra-Syria negotiations with the aim of finding a permanent political solution to the Syrian crisis.”

“Nowhere is the crisis of multilateralism more painfully evident than in Syria. The civil war has long since turned into a widespread regional conflict, with further potential for escalation in an already ravaged region. [...] As the second-largest humanitarian donor, Germany is willing to provide UNHCR with a further 116 million euros - that is, half of the amount currently needed - to help Syrian refugees in Jordan and Lebanon. But others also need to step up. After all, the Charter talks about we the peoples.”

“Disruptive foreign-policy approaches have now also reached the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Many people are keen to make us believe that the negotiated two-state solution is obsolete. They want us to think it is now merely a term used in diplomacy and can no longer be achieved. But whatever way you twist it, there will only be lasting peace if people can lead self-determined lives in security and dignity on both sides of the 1967 Lines. That is precisely why, even 25 years after Oslo, working on a negotiated two-state solution is still the right thing to do.”

“The conflict in Ukraine will also continue to occupy us. Along with France, Russia and Ukraine, we are working hard to implement the Minsk agreements. The focus is on the measures agreed a long time ago with a view to stabilising the ceasefire. All efforts, including our discussion on a possible UN mission in eastern Ukraine, are aimed at achieving that.”

“Take Iraq, where the terrorists of Islamic State have for the most part been militarily defeated. Instead of leaving the Iraqi authorities to fend for themselves, we are training security forces, fostering administrative structures and providing civil support to promote stabilisation, reconciliation and inclusive reconstruction in the country.”

“After all, the success of UN missions hinges on member states political backing. This is particularly true for Libya right now. To tackle the Herculean task of advancing functioning state structures, the United Nations needs our political support.”

“Peace is more than guns falling silent. Only just societies will remain peaceful in the long term - societies in which men and women enjoy equal rights and in which women participate in all social decision-making. This is not only a matter of fairness and respect. It is simply about humanity and reason.”

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Khemais Jhinaoui, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Tunisia

Theme: Participation, Human Rights

We hope to support the effectiveness of local programmes and along the same path of presidential and legislative election, these municipal elections showed a representation of the youth and women, something that reflects the awareness of the Tunisian society and its promotion of the interest of women and youth and the local and national levels.

H.E. the President of the Republic Albaj AlKhaleed made a new initiative to enhance equality and the status of women and a separate committee was established to consider the initiative. This initiative is the subject of comprehensive dialogue among different components of the Tunisian society, is a natural extension of the Tunisian pioneering experiment to reform in establishing a progressive society that respects individual and freedoms and collective freedoms and tries to achieve equality between men and women and achievements for women.

Achieving a just and comprehensive desired solution to the Palestinian question represents an urgent priority so we can restore peace and stability to the Middle East region which would enable our brotherly Palestinian people to restore and recover their legitimate rights and establish their state on their territories with East Jerusalem as its capital in accordance with the decisions of international legitimacy and the Arab Peace Initiative on the basis of the two-state solution.

ISIS ravaged women. It killed Shiite Turkmen women, it burned some of them alive. But we have full faith in our young people and our women because they rose up to defend their country.

We are focusing on young people and women, we are rolling out programmes to improve the plight and well-being of young people and women, to improve the living standards to put an end to levels of unemployment and to improve their skills base. This is all part of our efforts under the 2030 Agenda.

Speaker: H.E. Mrs. Ulla Tørnæs, Minister for Development Cooperation for the Kingdom of Denmark

Themes: Human Rights, Sexual and Gender-Based Violence

“Denmark is running for a seat on the Human Rights Council for the term 2019 to 2021. If elected, we will promote the rights and equal opportunities of women; continue our longstanding fight against torture; protect the rights of indigenous peoples; and encourage freedom of religion or belief. This has to be done without discrimination on any grounds, including sexual orientation and gender identity.”

“In several parts of the world, gender equality is but a distant hope. Women’s rights are under increasing pressure. We cannot accept this. We must stand up and challenge this. Women must unfold their potential - without question - to the benefit of all. We must ensure that she decides. Gender equality and equal opportunities is not only a fundamental human right. It is a precondition. For development, peace and prosperity in any country, anywhere in the world.”

“Girls are at much greater risk of being victims of sexual abuse and exploitation, of early child marriage and childbirth. Just think, in parts of the world, girls as low as nine years old are being forced to marry adult men. This is just not acceptable. We must let girls be girls, not brides. Education is a beacon of hope for these girls. That is why Denmark is now the biggest contributor to Education Cannot Wait. That is why Denmark will spend almost 70 million US dollars next year on education in developing countries. Because Denmark will leave no girl behind.”

“The conflict in Syria continues in its 8th year. So many have already experienced unspeakable suffering, evil and atrocities. Three million people have been at the brink of a humanitarian catastrophe in Idlib. This tragedy in Syria cannot go on.”

Date: 28 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Simon Coveney, Deputy Prime Minister The Republic of Ireland

Themes: Sexual and Gender-Based Violence, Protection, Justice, Rule of Law and Security Sector Reform

"Justice and accountability is always a better alternative to revenge, impunity or amnesty. And we have seen important developments in the area of gender-based and sexual violence, by enabling the prosecution of sexual violence as a war crime, a crime against humanity and genocide. [...] And I am pleased to report that earlier this month Ireland ratified the Amendments to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court on the Crime of Aggression which were agreed in Kampala. Yesterday I lodged the instrument of ratification with the UN Secretary-General."

"More broadly, the scale of the humanitarian crises facing the international community cannot be overstated. Over 134 million people around the world are in need of humanitarian assistance and protection, with conflict the single greatest driver of this need. As a country committed to humanitarian principles, we will continue contributing to international efforts to ease the plight of civilians suffering the impact of conflicts in South Sudan, the Central African Republic, Syria, Yemen, Palestine and elsewhere.”

“Settlement construction underlines this, and is causing ever-greater damage to the prospects for peace. Ireland, like many, is very conscious of the threat to Khan al Ahmar and other strategically-located West Bank villages. What happens there will tell us much about whether we can count on a real commitment to negotiating a two-state solution.”

“Ireland will continue that assistance and has increased our contribution to €7m for this year, recognising the financial pressures. I greatly regret recent cuts to UNRWA s funding by the US and plead with those in power to reconsider the consequence of their decisions. Reform of UNRWA is needed, but in the context of a peace deal and a functioning Palestinian State. Shutting off funding now is simply adding to the turmoil of current pressures where UNRWA cuts are interpreted as a collective punishment, targeting women and children.”

Date: 28 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Adel Ahmed Al-Jubeir, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia

Theme: Displacement and Humanitarian response

The Palestinian question has been pivotal for my country as well as for the Islamic world. We base on ourselves the conviction that Palestinian people have the right to build an independent Palestinian State on the 1967 borders with Al-Koods Al-Shareef (East Jerusalem) as the capital based on the resolutions and the Arab Peace Initiative.

We reiterate our commitment to a political settlement to the crisis in Yemen, on the basis of three references: the Gulf Initiative, the outcomes and conclusions of national Yemeni dialogue, as well as UN Security Council resolutions. [...] We shall continue to facilitate all humanitarian efforts to end the disaster plaguing the fraternal Yemeni peoples. We have sought to support the Yemeni economy, including recently with the establishment of a 2 billion dollar fund, based at the central bank of Yemen.

This eighth year of the Syrian crisis, we see a humanitarian landscape which requires us all to shoulder our responsibilities. My country has, from the very first day of the crisis, has sought to place Syrian individual at the heart of our efforts, we have endeavored to ensure that Syrian people can arrive at their ambitions to live on their own soil, for this reason, on the basis of our convictions, we reiterate the need to respect Security Council Resolution 2254 to arrive at a political settlement in line with the Geneva I Declaration principles.

Saudi Arabia is a country which supports legitimacy in Libya. We would recall the importance of upholding the Saharet agreement to solving the crisis plaguing Libya. We call for unity in Libya, for respect for its territorial integrity. My country was among the leading donors in terms of humanitarian and development assistance, we have moved 3.7% of GDP, thereby surpassing thereby surpassing the quota called for by the United Nations.

Speaker: H.E. Mrs. Marise Payne, Minister for Foreign Affairs Australia

Themes: General Women, Peace and Security, Participation, Peace Processes

“Mr President, Australia like the United Nations is committed to improving humanitarian assistance in fragile settings. I commend the Secretary General for establishing the United for Gender Parity initiative, and for declaring zero tolerance for sexual exploitation and abuse. Australia is also a robust and strong contributor to the UN’s Women Peace and Security agenda, first set out in UN Security Council Resolution 1325. Australia was one of the first Member States to draw up a National Action Plan on Women Peace and Security, and we are continuing work on our next five year National Action Plan.”

“Examples of our work on this issue include a benchmark of a minimum of 15 percent of female military members deployed on Australian peacekeeping mission teams, which I was proud to support and to work to see grow over the past three years in my previous role as Australia's Minister for Defence. Australia also has active training programs on Women Peace and Security in Afghanistan, Iraq, and the Philippines, where our military is assisting partner forces to deal with counter-terrorism and counter-insurgency challenges. Australia firmly believes that it is only through the inclusion of women in all aspects of peace and security initiatives, including negotiations, the design of peace processes, and the management and enforcement of peace programs, that lasting and resilient security can be achieved.”

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Kairat Abdrakhmanov, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Kazakhstan

Themes: Human Rights, Participation

“Millions of people live under a shadow of dreadful wars, such as in Syria, Yemen and many other corners of the Globe. Kazakhstan believes that war can never be a lasting solution to any problem. Based on this conviction and sharing the belief that the only viable solution to the current crisis in Syria is the inclusive and Syrian-led political process, we launched the Astana process towards strengthening confidence-building measures between the conflicting parties in Syria.”

“Besides, Kazakhstan for many years has been contributing significantly to peace and rehabilitation of this country [Afghanistan]. We believe that the revival of the country as a prosperous and peaceful neighbour will have a positive impact on overall security in our region. A special role in this process should be played by Afghan women. To increase international awareness and support for the needs of Afghan women and girls, we hosted the Regional Conference on Empowering Women in Afghanistan on September 5, 2018 in Astana. It was attended by female politicians, parliamentarians, entrepreneurs and civil sector members from Afghanistan and Central Asian nations. The event gave great impetus to strengthening the role of women not only in Afghanistan, but in the whole Central Asian region – helping to improve their lives and to influence their future.”

“Today, the ability to show global leadership and responsibility is challenged by the numerous threats – from spread of weapons – conventional and of mass destruction, as well as terrorism, extremism, organized crime, and all forms of trafficking, to food, water, energy and health insecurities. From violation of the human rights, particularly rights of women, youth and children, degrading human dignity to lack of respect and justice for all.”

This only happened through the hard work of women pioneers who changed our politics and our law to empower all women in Iceland. In good cooperation with a few good men, of course."

"More needs to be done at home, but we stand ready to share our experience with other states. Gender equality is a master-key to unlocking sustainable development in all countries in line with the goals of Agenda 2030."

"Our priorities also revolve around promoting women's human rights and safeguarding our children's rights and freedom from violence. We will work to advance the human rights of LGBTI individuals and, lastly, focus on the connection between climate change and human rights."

Chad reaffirms support for United Nations efforts aimed at promoting a political solution to the crisis, and urges the Yemeni actors concerned to privilege the dialogue and to conform to the relevant resolutions of the UN Security Council.

On Syria, Chad reiterates its support for the mediation efforts of the United Nations, and calls on the parties to the conflict to abolish the suffering they have been inflicting on their people for over 7 years by stopping the violence and resolutely engaging in dialogue and reconciliation. Chad urges belligerents to respect international law humanitarian assistance and to facilitate the delivery of aid to the civil.

With regard to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, Chad reiterates its commitment to the two-state solution, living side-by-side in peace, stability and security in their borders before 07 June 1967 with East Jerusalem as the capital of Palestine.

Sem Idriss Deby Itno, President of the Republic, Head of State, instituted a law adopted May 22, 2018, which is a mandatory quota of 30% for women in all functions nominative and elective, with the ultimate objective of gradually achieving parity. Theme: Protection

When it comes to economic, social and cultural rights, we have been working tirelessly to improve the condition of women and to ensure gender equality, without overlooking the need to ensure education and free medical care for all, pursuant to Article 7 of the constitutional declaration.

The situation in the Middle East remains extremely difficult and peace will be difficult when the Palestinians are continuing to suffer and settlements continue to be built and the city of Jerusalem continues to suffer and international resolutions continue to be ignored. We stand side-by-side with the Palestinian people, rejecting the law on the the nation-state of the Jewish people. This is a dangerous escalation and an attempt to try to ignore the Palestinian issue, trying to deprive the Palestinian people of their land and this is unacceptable.

Furthermore, the people of Syria are experiencing disastrous humanitarian situations in some regions as a result of a conflict which has caused human and material damage on an enormous scale and the displacement of many innocent Syrians.

With regard to Yemen, we express our concern with regard to the humanitarian situation there and the disastrous consequences of that. This conflict is a threat to the security of the country and the region. We call for an end to the bloodbath in that country and to alleviate the suffering of this brotherly people.

“The Palestinian Cause is the central problem for the Middle East [...] It is convenient to create favorable conditions for positive discussions between the Palestinian and Israeli parties, to reach a comprehensive settlement, based on the two-state solution, since not establishing a Palestinian State will perpetuate violence and terrorism. [...] For, achieving a peaceful environment between the Palestinian and Israeli parties is essential to establish peace in the region. We also call upon countries of the world, particularly, the United States [...] to consider the future of this cause from the perspective of supporting orientations in peace, facilitating the work of international organizations, and not sacrificing peace.”

“The suffering of the Republic of Yemen requires all of us to double our efforts to help Yemen. The international community has to adopt a humanitarian project that would enable access to humanitarian aid by the Yemeni people in different provinces [...]. Also, my country supports the efforts of the Special Envoy to Yemen, Martin Griffiths and calls on facilitating his mission in holding meetings and consultations with all Yemeni parties, and facilitating their transportation to participate in such meetings. We envision that the political solution should take into account, the Yemeni reality, and that all Yemeni parties and Political Forces, in Yemen and abroad, should be given a chance in determining a prosperous future of their country.”

“Violence is receding apparently in several Syrian areas.. Undoubtedly, the collaborative effort had a significant role in combating terrorism; and we hope that such efforts and joint cooperation continues in Syria and other conflict areas. We also laud the efforts achieved by the Special Envoy to Syria, Staffan de Mistura in helping the Syrian parties develop the constitutional foundation, and build on what has been accomplished in Geneva, Astana and Sochi to stop the war and reach a national reconciliation that ends the conflict.”

“These governments formed an illegitimate international coalition, led by the United States. The coalition destroyed the Syrian city of Raqqa completely; it destroyed infrastructure and public services in the areas it targeted; it committed massacres against civilians, including children and women, which amount to war crimes under international law.”

“The situation in Syria cannot be divorced from the battle raging between two camps on the world stage: one of the camps promotes peace, stability, and prosperity across the world, advocates dialogue and mutual understanding, respects international law, and upholds the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other states. The other camp tries to create chaos in international relations and employs colonization and hegemony as tools to further its narrow interests.”

“A special committee was recently established to coordinate the return of refugees to their places of origin in Syria and to help them regain their lives. However, some western countries are spreading irrational fears among refugees; they are politicizing what should be a purely humanitarian issue, using refugees as a bargaining chip to serve their political agenda”

Themes: Displacement and Humanitarian Response

“To truly address widening inequality and wage stagnation, we must address its root causes.”

“ASEAN Member States are also committed to the peaceful resolution of disputes through multilateral processes...The voluntary return of displaced persons to Myanmar in a safe, secure and dignified way should commence without undue delay. Ultimately, a political solution needs to be found, involving reconciliation, fairness, justice, and better prospects for all communities.”

Country: San Marino

(<https://gadebate.un.org/73/san-marino>)

Date: 29 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Nicola Renzi, Minister for Foreign and Political Affairs and Justice of San Marino

Themes: Reconstruction and Peacebuilding, Sexual and Gender-Based Violence, Human Rights

“This year’s theme is inevitably linked to the UN reform process. This process is of fundamental importance for the future world balance, for guaranteeing international peace and security and must remain at the centre of all our efforts.”

“The United Nations has often been criticized in recent years for the inability of the Security Council to intervene adequately in Syria and other conflict situations. Unfortunately, this has undermined the credibility of our Organisation.”

“Only with the effective and full participation of women in decision-making processes that have a direct impact on their lives, will it be possible to build sustainable, resilient and inclusive societies.”

“The Republic of San Marino reaffirms its commitment to the fight against all forms of violence based on gender, all forms of sexual abuse and exploitation. The objective of gender equality, emancipation of women and girls and full realization of their human rights must be achieved.”

Speaker: H.E. Mrs. Karin Kneissl, Federal Minister for Europe, Integration and Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Austria

Themes: Sexual and Gender-Based Violence, Humanitarian Response and Displacement

“Concerning the greatest tragedy in our time, I speak of Yemen, Austria is ready to increase its humanitarian commitment.”

“Multilateralism has failed several million women worldwide. So have individual States. However, gender equality is about more than legal provisions. It is about a daily practice in our countries and societies. This is why the fight against discrimination and improving the situation of women and girls worldwide has been a longstanding concern of the Austrian foreign and development policy. Our focus lies on the Women, Peace and Security agenda, the political and economic empowerment of women, as well as the fight against gender based violence - with a particular focus on combating female genital mutilation.”

“More than 200 million women and girls worldwide are victims of female genital mutilation (FGM). Together we must stand up against this humiliation, this breach of human rights and the appalling violation of women’s physical integrity. In 2018, the Austrian Ministry of Foreign Affairs has earmarked more than 1 Million Euro to help victims of FGM through surgical restoration. Here in New York, I had very constructive talks with the United Nations Population Fund and UNICEF for the purpose of joining forces against the violation of basic rights and physical integrity of girls and women.”

Date: 29 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Shaikh Khalid Bin Ahmed Al-Khalifa, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom of Bahrain

Themes: Sexual and Gender-Based Violence, Human Rights

“During the 62nd Commission on the Status of Women, nominations were invited for her Royal Highness Princess Sabeeka bint Ibrahim Al Khalifa Global Award for Women’s Empowerment. This Award aims to highlight achievements in the field of equal opportunities between men and women.”

“The Kingdom of Bahrain’s ranking among Tier 1 countries in the 2018 US State Department Report on Trafficking in Persons, issued last June makes it the first country in the Middle East and North Africa to achieve this high status.”

“We reaffirm the need for a peaceful solution to the Syrian crisis with effective participation and a strong Arab role.”

“The coalition is committed to restoring peace and security to Yemen and assisting the people of Yemen in all areas, most particularly the humanitarian aspects.”

“We need to exert further efforts to reach a just and comprehensive peace that offers the Palestinian people, like all other peoples, the right to a decent life and to an independent sovereign state...and guarantees the return of refugees.”

“We reiterate the Kingdom of Bahrain’s consistent position in support of all efforts towards reconstruction of the state and the unification of the military institution to enable it to protect Libya and confront all forms of terrorism.”

(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/burundi>)

Date: 29 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Ezéchiel Nibigira, Minister for Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation of the Republic of Burundi

Theme: Participation

The national independent electoral commission under the new constitution has just been established this respects political, ethnic, regional and gender inclusivity.

The absence of a solution in the Israel-Palestine conflict fosters insecurity, instability and destabilization in the middle east. The international community should mobilize to end this conflict that has continued for more than 50 years. Burundi supports the proposal where two states, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within safe and recognised borders within peace and mutual respect. In line with relevant security council resolutions. There is no alternative, this is the only solution.

Theme: None

“On this note, we are particularly concerned with the unresolved question of Palestine. For more than half a century, Palestinians are denied peace, justice and freedom. In solidarity with the Palestinian people, we strongly condemn actions and measures that blatantly violate their rights and dignity. These violations are against international law, including the UN Charter. Like many countries, we have been alarmed by the developments in Jerusalem, and the continued violence in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. We remain firm in supporting the call to protect the Palestinian population, as well as the creation of a fully independent Palestinian State, with East Jerusalem as its capital. [...] We are also encouraged by the State of Palestine’s assumption of the chairmanship of the Group of 77 next year, which is a significant milestone not only for its own history but for the Group as a whole.”

Date: 29 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Denis Moses, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago

Themes: Sexual and Gender-Based, Participation, Disarmament

“As we continue to pursue gender equality across all borders and spheres of endeavour, your assumption to the seat of the Presidency of the General Assembly is further impetus for global rethinking and acceptance of female leadership, and toward strengthening the global pursuit of gender parity, empowerment and equality.”

“The existential threat posed by unmitigated climate change and global temperature increase, the undeniable challenge of extreme poverty, violent extremism, gender-based violence, and the spread of new and infectious diseases is one that is best faced together, as Member States of the United Nations.”

“On the global level, Trinidad and Tobago fully subscribes to the object and purpose of the Arms Trade Treaty, which can be leveraged as a mechanism for reducing incidences of armed violence in the region. Thus, since 2010, Trinidad and Tobago has tabled the biennial resolution on Women, Disarmament, Non-proliferation and arms control, which encourages women’s participation in disarmament decision-making processes.”

Themes: Human Rights, Conflict Prevention

“We face many challenges to dignity of individuals, global prosperity, and sustainable development, including gender inequality, youth unemployment, global health threats, climate change, violent extremism, terrorism, forced displacement, or uncontrolled migration.”

“The UN Security Council has been characterized by blocking tactics rather than cooperation. Its failure to act on the world's worst atrocities is tangible in several ongoing brutal conflicts, from Syria to Yemen.”

“The Czech Republic will continue to champion SDG 16, not only as a follow up of omi ECOSOC Presidency, but mainly as a cornerstone of the 2030 Agenda. We consider peace, justice and functioning institutions our priority and a solid base on which a sustainable future for everyone can be built.”

“Apart from conflict prevention, special focus should be put on post-conflict stabilization. Those efforts should be visible in the field.”

“For crimes committed in Syria, we are supporting... the so called "Triple I Mechanism", a mechanism to Assist in the Investigation and Prosecution of Persons Responsible for the Most Serious Crimes under International Law Committed in Syria since March 2011. The accountability is not only a way to bring justice to those suffering in conflicts, it is also a path towards reconciliation and a crucial means to prevent atrocities from reoccurring.”

Themes: General WPS, Human Rights

“We emphasize the fact that Your Excellency is only the fourth woman to undertake such a noble function and we hope this number to increase in the future in the name of a greater inclusion of women in positions of such importance in the Organization.”

“If we really want peaceful, equitable and sustainable societies, our efforts must continue to be conducted to mitigate the effects of the current armed conflicts existing throughout the world, and to prevent the emergence and escalation of regional tensions, we [need] to continue the dialogue aiming the peaceful resolution of tensions that are occurring all over the planet, areas of conflict that keep claiming thousands of innocent lives, in particular the conflict in Syria.”

“In the same way, we also salute the Democratic Republic of Congo by convening the general elections scheduled for December this year, and we formulate warm vows for them to be transparent and fair and conducted in a peaceful and harmonious environment.”

“We appeal for the dialogue and the continuation of negotiations to find a peaceful and negotiated solution in respecting to the right of the Palestinian people to conduct their own destiny, accordingly with the fundamental principles of international law.”

“Our Organization must indeed assume its global leadership role in the unceasing pursuit of peaceful solutions to the conflicts that continue to exist in the world, in reducing inequalities, in promoting gender equality and equity policies, and in the uncompromising defense of peace and human rights.”

Country: Senegal

(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/senegal>)

Date: 28 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Sidiki Kaba, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Senegal

Theme: Implementation

My country attaches great priority to improving the lives of women and girls, this is why robust social programs are being implemented for the emerging Senegal 2035 plan. This plan's goal is the emancipation and empowerment of girls.

We must ensure the right of the Palestinian people to a viable state with East Jerusalem as its capital alongside the state of Israel with secure and internationally recognised borders.

Country: Republic of Congo

(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/congo>)

Date: 29 September 2018

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Jean-Claude Gakosso, Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Congo

Themes: Implementation, Human Rights

The Republic of Congo encourages all initiatives that contribute the maintenance of peace in Libya. It supports the idea of holding general, inclusive and credible, free and transparent elections as soon as possible, while considering that it is essential to create a context of appeasement, in particular through the organization of a reconciliation conference, so that elections do cause further violence.

For the Republic of the Congo, realising the objectives of peace and development requires greater integration of women and young people in the processes of decisions and actions aimed at the eradication of poverty [...]. Our firm belief is that we cannot hope to build societies that are more just, more prosperous [...], as long as women who constitute half of humanity, and as long as the youth who are constructing tomorrow's world [...] are prevented from enjoying their rights.

That is why my country has never spared any effort to implement its international commitments, in particular by building confidence and by giving a positive precedence to these two categories of the population.

This year, by adopting its National Development Plan "PND 2018-2022" - the Government of my country has intended to put forward three major strategic pillars that include particularly women and young people, namely: in-depth training, the governance and diversification of the economy, with special emphasis on agriculture, livestock and fish farming.

Theme: Participation

“While we-together with our partners- militarily take out and dismantle all terrorists hideouts, we are also engaging our religious leaders, elders, the youth, women and civil society groups to turn the tide against the twisted ideology of hate and religious intolerance. The silver lining is, young men and women are NOT joining Alshabab out of a desirable appeal. That ideology is no longer popular; Alshabab and Alqaeda DO NOT have a ready stream of new and volunteer recruits in Somalia. NOT ANYMORE.”

“It is also important to note that some within their ranks- mostly the young men and women- have headed our amnesty offer, denounced violence and peacefully surrendered.”

Country: Burkina Faso

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Alpha Barry, Minister for Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation of Burkina Faso

Themes: Participation, Reconstruction and Peacebuilding, Implementation

The Special Program for the Creation of Jobs for Young People and Women (PSCE / IF) aims to promote access to jobs and the acquisition of vocational skills by young people and women, with a view to opening up opportunities for them and to ensure sustainable integration into the labor market. In addition, the Integrated Women's Empowerment Program aims to strengthen their productive capacities and their participation in Burkina Faso's economic and social development by 2020.

The consolidation and maintenance of peace is a primary responsibility of national governments, which must determine the necessary priorities and strategies by involving all groups of society. In order to consolidate peace, the root causes of conflict - poverty, exclusion, discrimination, the effects of climate change - must be addressed.

With regard to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which continues to be of great concern, Burkina Faso remains convinced that its solution can only be a political, peaceful just and equitable one based on the existence of two States, living side by side, within safe and recognized borders.

Country: Holy See

(<https://gadebate.un.org/en/73/holy-see>)

Date: 1 October 2018

Speaker: H.E. Archbishop Paul Richard Gallagher, Secretary of relations with States of the Holy See

Themes: Participation

“The Universal Declaration affirms the equal rights of men and women as flowing from their inherent dignity and worth. It is therefore necessary to adopt all measures to promote equality in rights and full and equal participation of women and men in society.”

“Beyond their professional competence and technical knowledge, women have, indeed, shown a special capacity for recognizing, affirming, nurturing and defending the inherent dignity of others, and to contribute greatly in the efforts to promote a peaceful, respectful and harmonious world. As Pope Francis affirms it: women look at life through their own eyes and men are not able to look at life in this way. The way of viewing a problem, of seeing anything, is different for a woman compared to a man. They must be complementary. The true progress in humanity that is dramatically needed in our challenged world, will also depend on the full participation of women on an equal and same footing with men, in the civil, political, social, economic or cultural fields. We note with great concern that women’s indispensable role is often undervalued and can even be a vehicle for the exploitation and violation of their dignity and fundamental rights. Still today, women face a variety of challenges and difficulties in various parts of the world. They experience discrimination in the workplace; they are often forced to choose between work and family; they disproportionately suffer in conflict situations. In poor and developing countries, women bear the heaviest burdens: it is they who travel many miles in search of water, who too often do not have access even to the most basic medical assistance that they need in childbirth, who are kidnapped for sexual exploitation or forced into marriage. At times, they are even denied the right to life simply for being female.”

“The authentic advancement of women entails, rather, absolute respect for their inherent dignity, while acknowledging their critical roles not only in the various spheres of society, but also in the family, as equal participants in marriage as spouses. It is therefore contradictory to seek to promote women's empowerment while suppressing their unique natural potentialities in the name of some particular interests or those of an ideological agenda. It is also incoherent when women's irreplaceable contribution to society through motherhood is stigmatized as an obstacle to their advancement and empowerment, instead of being acknowledged, supported and accompanied with measures aimed at alleviating the difficulties that they may encounter. The Holy See wishes to avail itself of this occasion to express grateful appreciation for all those women who, sometimes heroically, have raised and educated generations of responsible daughters and sons. The world owes them gratitude and esteem, support and solidarity.”

"In the Middle East, the multifaceted political and diplomatic pressures and violence, together with the various humanitarian situations, especially in Syria, must be adequately and urgently addressed by the international community. Furthermore, all interested parties must also demonstrate a unified will to strive for an end to violence and reach "a solution which can enable Palestinians and Israelis alike to live at last in peace within clearly established and internationally recognized borders, thus implementing the two state solution. There is a need to promote a genuine public awareness of certain ongoing situations of conflict with a view to reaching a negotiated and peaceful solution, especially in Ukraine, Libya and the Central African Republic, among others. The Holy See considers the recent political developments in South Sudan and the Democratic Republic of the Congo, as well as between Ethiopia and Eritrea, as positive signs toward building peaceful and democratic societies based on the firm hope that agreements reached will be mutually respected."

Speaker: H.E. Mr. Marc-André Blanchard Chair of the Delegation of Canada

Themes: Participation, Sexual and Gender-Based Violence

"Canada is spearheading the Elsie Initiative – a practical plan to act on our shared promise to double the number of women in peacekeeping operations. We set that as a goal, first and foremost, because of our shared belief in the fundamental equal rights of women."

"We also know that having women in the ranks – and in charge –makes peacekeeping more effective and its results more durable."

"As is the case everywhere, Canada's actions in Myanmar, Syria, Ukraine and Venezuela are guided by an unequivocal commitment to protecting and promoting human rights."

"If elected [to the Security Council], we will work with others to tackle climate change and violent extremism, and to promote economic security and the empowerment of women and girls."
